Truth is the secret of eloquence and of virtue, the basis of moral authority; it is the highest summit of art and of life. Journal [1883]

"The distance is somewhat great," I replied; "direct the telescope on Russia, and then you will be able to observe us; otherwise you can't really see anything at all."

Letter to Apollon Maikov [August 16 (28), 1867]

I want to tell you now about the insects to whom God gave "sensual lust." . . . I am that insect, brother, and it is said of me especially. All we Karamazovs are such insects, and, angel as you are, that insect lives in you too, and will stir a tempest in your blood. Tempests, because sensual lust is a tempest—worse than a tempest! Beauty is a terrible and awful thing! It is terrible because it has not been fathomed, for God sets us nothing but riddles.¹ Here the boundaries meet and all contradictions exist side by side. . . .

Yes, man is broad, too broad, indeed. I'd have him narrower. The devil only knows what to make of it! What to the mind is shameful is beauty and nothing else to the heart. Is there beauty in Sodom? Believe me, that for the immense mass of mankind beauty is found in Sodom. Did you know that secret? The awful thing is that beauty is mysterious as well as terrible. God and devil are fighting there, and the battlefield is the heart of man.

*The Brothers Karamazov*²
[1879-1880], bk. III, ch. 3

And if that is so, if they dare not forgive, what becomes of harmony? Is there in the whole world a being who would have the right to forgive and could forgive? I don't want harmony. From love of humanity I don't want it. I would rather be left with unavenged suffering. I would rather remain with my unavenged suffering and unsatisfied indignation, even if I were wrong. Besides, too high a price is asked for harmony; it's beyond our means to pay so much to enter on it. And so I hasten to give back my entrance ticket, and if I am an honest man I am bound to give it back as soon as possible. And that I am doing. It's not God that I don't accept, Alyosha, only I most respectfully return Him the ticket. Ib. V, 4

We have corrected Thy work and have founded it upon miracle, mystery and authority. And men rejoiced that they were again led like sheep, and that the terrible gift that brought them such suffering, was, at last, lifted from their hearts.

Ib. VI, 3

That was a sign to me at that moment. It's for the babe I'm going. Because we are responsible for all.

Ib. XI, 4

Who doesn't desire his father's death?

Ib. XII, 5

Our fatal troika dashes on in her headlong flight perhaps to destruction, and in all Russia for long past men have stretched out imploring hands and called a halt to its furious reckless course. And if other nations stand aside from that troika that may be not from respect, as the poet would fain believe, but simply from horror. And well it is that they stand aside, but maybe they will cease one day to do so and will form a firm wall confronting the hurrying apparition and will check the frenzied rush of our lawlessness, for the sake of their own safety, enlightenment and civilization.

The translator of Homer should above all be penetrated by a sense of four qualities of his author: that he is eminently rapid; that he is eminently plain and direct, both in the evolution of his thought and in the expression of it, that is, both in his syntax and in his words; that he is eminently plain and French author. His most notable work, Ober-mann, was published in 1804.

direct in the substance of his thought, that is, in his matter and ideas; and, finally, that he is eminently noble.

On Translating Homer [1861]

The Iliad has a great master's genuine stamp, and that stamp is the grand style. Ib.

Of these two literatures [France and Germany], as of the intellect of Europe in general, the main effort, for now many years, has been a critical effort; the endeavor, in all branches of knowledge — theology, philosophy, history, art, science — to see the object as in itself it really is. Ib.

The grand style arises in poetry, when a noble nature, poetically gifted, treats with simplicity or with severity a serious subject. Ib.

Nations are not truly great solely because the individuals composing them are numerous, free, and active; but they are great when these numbers, this freedom, and this activity are employed in the service of an ideal higher than that of an ordinary man, taken by himself. Democracy [1861]

It is a very great thing to be able to think as you like; but, after all, an important question remains: what you think. Ib.

The critical power . . . tends to make an intellectual situation of which the creative power can profitably avail itself . . . to make the best ideas prevail.

The Function of Criticism at the Present Time [1864]

Ideas cannot be too much prized in and for themselves, cannot be too much lived with. Ib.

There is the world of ideas and the world of practice; the French are often for suppressing the one and the English the other; but neither is to be suppressed. Ib.

Burke is so great because, almost alone in England, he brings thought to bear upon politics, he saturates politics with thought.

The Function of Criticism at the Present Time

His [Burke's] greatness is that he lived in a world which neither English Liberalism nor English Toryism is apt to enter — the world of ideas. Ib.

The notion of the free play of the mind upon all subjects being a pleasure in itself, being an object of desire, being an essential provider of elements without which a nation's spirit, whatever compensations it may have for them, must, in the long run, die of inanition, hardly enters into an Englishman's thoughts. Ib.

I am bound by my own definition of criticism: a disinterested endeavor to learn and propagate the best that is known and thought in the world. Ib.

Whispering from her¹ towers the last enchantments of the Middle Age . . . Home of lost causes, and forsaken beliefs, and unpopular names, and impossible loyalties!

preface

America, that chosen home of newspapers. Ib.

I am a Liberal, yet I am a Liberal tempered by experience, reflection, and renoucement, and I am, above all, a believer in culture. Ib. Introduction

Culture is then properly described not as having its origin in curiosity, but as having its origin in the love of perfection; it is a study of perfection.

Culture and Anarchy, Sweetness and Light

Not a having and a resting, but a growing and a becoming is the character of perfection as culture conceives it. Ib.

The pursuit of perfection, then, is the pursuit of sweetness and light.¹ . . . He who works for sweetness and light united, works to make reason and the will of God prevail. Ib.

The men of culture are the true apostles of equality. Ib.

The governing idea of Hellenism is spirit of consciousness, that of Hebraism, strictness of conscience.

Ib. Hebraism and Hellenism

Below the surface stream, shallow and light,

Of what we say and feel — below the stream,

As light, of what we think we feel, there flows

With noiseless current, strong, obscure and deep,

The central stream of what we feel indeed.

St. Paul and Protestantism [1870]

Culture, the acquainting ourselves with the best that has been known and said in the world.

Literature and Dogma [1873],
preface

Conduct is three-fourths of our life and its largest concern. Ib. ch. 1

Choose equality.

Mixed Essays [1879]. Equality

We have the religion of inequality. Ib.

To be humanized is to comply with the true law of our human nature; servare modum, finemque tenere, Naturamque sequi, says Lucan; "to keep our measure, and to hold fast our end, and to follow Nature."

Mixed Essays. Equality

Inequality has the natural and necessary effect, under the present circumstances, of materializing our upper class, vulgarizing our middle class, and brutalizing our lower class. Ib.

For poetry the idea is everything; the rest is a world of illusion, of divine illusion. Poetry attaches its emotion to the idea; the idea is the fact. The strongest part of our religion today is its unconscious poetry.

Introduction to WARD, English Poets [1880]

Eutrapelia. "A happy and gracious flexibility," Pericles calls this quality of the Athenians . . . lucidity of thought, clearness and propriety of language, freedom from prejudice and freedom from stiffness, openness of mind, amiability of manners, all these seem to go along with a certain happy flexibility of nature, and to depend upon it.

Irish Essays [1882]. A Speech at Eton

English civilization — the humanizing, the bringing into one harmonious and truly humane life, of the whole body of English society — that is what interests me.

Ib. Ecce, Convertimur ad Gentes

That which in England we call the middle class is in America virtually the nation.

A Word About America [1882]

A Word More About America [1885]

What really dissatisfies in American civilization is the want of the interesting, a want due chiefly to the want of those two great elements of the interesting, which are elevation and beauty.

The art of war is simple enough.
Find out where your enemy is. Get at him as soon as you can. Strike at him as hard as you can and as often as you can, and keep moving on.²

They [the Pilgrim Fathers] fell upon nine months of winter and three months of cold weather, and that called out the best energies of the men, and of the women too, to get a mere subsistmate. In their efforts to do that they cultivated industry and frugality at the same time — which is the real foundation of the greatness of the Pilgrims.

FRANCIS PARKMAN
1823-1893

The growth of New England was a result of the aggregate efforts of a busy multitude, each in his narrow circle toiling for himself, to gather competence or wealth. The expansion of New France was the achievement of a gigantic ambition striving to grasp a continent. It was a vain attempt.

Pioneers of France in the New World [1865], introduction

A boundless vision grows upon us; an untamed continent; vast wastes of forest verdure; mountains silent in primeval sleep; river, lake, and glimmering pool; wilderness oceans mingling with the sky. Such was the domain which France conquered for civilization. Plumed helmets gleamed in the shade of its forests, priestly vestments in its dens and fastnesses of ancient barbarism. Men steeped in antique learning, pale with the close breath of the cloister, here spent the noon and evening of their lives, ruled savage hordes with a mild, parental sway, and stood serene before the direst shapes of death. Men of courtly nurture, heirs to the polish of a far-reaching ancestry, here, with their dauntless hardihood, put to shame the boldest sons of toil.

Pioneers of France in the New World, introduction

Faithfulness to the truth of history involves far more than a research, however patient and scrupulous, into special facts. Such facts may be detailed, with the most minute exactness, and yet the narrative, taken as a whole, may be unmeaning or untrue. The narrator must seek to imbue himself with the life and spirit of the time. He must study events in their bearings near and remote; in the character, habits, and manners of those who took part in them. He must himself be, as it were, a sharer or a spectator of the action he describes.

Ib.

If any pale student, glued to his desk, here seek an apology for a way of life whose natural fruit is that pallid and emasculate scholarship of which New England has had too many examples, it will be far better that this sketch had not been written. For the student there is, in its season, no better place than the saddle, and no better companion than the rifle or the oar.

The reason why so few good books are written is, that so few people that can write know anything. In general an author has always lived in a room, has read books, has cultivated science, is acquainted with the style and sentiments of the best authors, but he is out of the way of employing his own eyes and ears. He has nothing to hear and nothing to see. His life is a vacuum. Ib.

Whatever your occupation may be and however crowded your hours with affairs, do not fail to secure at least a few minutes every day for refreshment of your inner life with a bit of poetry.

Used by a Boston newspaper as a heading for a column of reprinted poems

The voice of protest, of warning, of appeal is never more needed than when the clamor of life and drum, echoed by the press and too often by the pulpit, is bidding all men fall in and keep step and obey in silence the tyrannous word of command. Then, more than ever, it is the duty of the good citizen not to be silent. True Patriotism [1898]

¹Of course you have read Tolstoi's War and Peace and Anna Karenina. I never had that exquisite felicity before the summer, and now I feel as if I knew the perfection in the representation of human life. Life indeed seems less real than his tale of it. whether the red-haired artilleryman was killed or not, whether the cannons had been taken or saved. But he saw nothing of all that. Above him there was nothing but the sky—the lofty sky, not clear, but still immeasurably lofty, with gray clouds creeping quietly over it.

War and Peace [1865–1869],¹
pt. III, ch. 16

Three days afterwards the little princess was buried, and Prince Andrey went to the steps of the tomb to take his last farewell of her. Even in the coffin the face was the same, though the eyes were closed. “Ah, what have you done to me?” it still seemed to say.

Ib. IV, 9

In historical events great men—so called—are but the labels that serve to give a name to an event, and like labels, they have the least possible connection with the event itself. Every action of theirs, that seems to them an act of their own free will, is in an historical sense not free at all, but in bondage to the whole course of previous history, and predestined from all eternity.

[1886]

Ivan Ilych saw that he was dying, and he was in continuous despair.

In the depth of his heart he knew he was dying, but not only was he not accustomed to the thought, he simply did not and could not grasp it.

The syllogism he had learned from Kiezwetter's Logic: “Caius is a man, men are mortal, therefore Caius is mortal,” had always seemed to him correct as applied to Caius, but certainly not as applied to himself. That Caius—man in the abstract—was mortal, was perfectly correct, but he was not Caius, not an abstract man, but a creature quite, quite separate from all others.

"The horror of that moment," the

"You will, though," the Queen said,

Beware the Jabberwock, my son!
The jaws that bite, the claws that catch!

Beware the Jubjub bird, and shun
The frumious Bandersnatch!
Ib. [Jabberwocky, st. 1, 2]

And, as in uffish thought he stood,
The Jabberwock, with eyes of flame, Came whiffing through the tulgey wood,
And burred as it came!

One, two! One, two! And through and through
The vorpal blade went snicker-snack!
He left it dead, and with its head
He went galumphing back.

"And hast thou slain the Jabberwock?
Come to my arms, my beamish boy!
O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!"
He chortled in his joy.

ain't. That's logic." Ib.

The sun was shining on the sea,
Shining with all his might;
He did his very best to make
The billows smooth and bright —
And this was odd, because it was
The middle of the night.

Ib. [The Walrus and the Carpenter, st. 1]

The Walrus and the Carpenter
Were walking close at hand:
They wept like anything to see Such quantities of sand:
"If this were only cleared away,"
They said, "it would be grand!"

"If seven maids with seven mops Swept it for half a year,
Do you suppose," the Walrus said,
"That they could get it clear?"
"I doubt it," said the Carpenter,
And shed a bitter tear.

Ib. [st. 4, 5]

"O Oysters, come and walk with us!"
The Walrus did beseech.
"A pleasant walk, a pleasant talk, Along the briny beach."

Ib. [st. 6]

And thick and fast they came at last,
And more, and more, and more —
All hopping through the frothy waves,
And scrambling to the shore.

Ib. [st. 9]

"The time has come," the Walrus said,
"To talk of many things:
Of shoes — and ships — and sealing-wax —

Of cabbages — and kings —
 And why the sea is boiling hot —
 And whether pigs have wings.”
Through the Looking-Glass, ch. 4 [The Walrus and the Carpenter, st. 11]

“But wait a bit,” the Oysters cried,
 “Before we have our chat;
 For some of us are out of breath,
 And all of us are fat!” Ib. [st. 12]

The Carpenter said nothing but “The butter’s spread too thick!”
Ib. [st. 16]

“I weep for you,” the Walrus said:
 “I deeply sympathize.”
 With sobs and tears he sorted out
 Those of the largest size, Holding his pocket-handkerchief
 Before his streaming eyes.
Ib. [st. 17]

But answer came there none —
 And this was scarcely odd, because They’d eaten every one.

“No, it can’t,” said the Queen. “It’s jam every other day: today isn’t any other day, you know.” Ib.

 works backwards,” the Queen remarked. Ib.

Consider anything, only don’t cry!
Ib.

“There’s no use trying,” she said:
 “one can’t believe impossible things.”

“I daresay you haven’t had much practice,” said the Queen. “When I was your age, I always did it for half-an-hour a day. Why, sometimes I’ve believed as many as six impossible things before breakfast.” Ib.

They gave it me — for an unbirthday present. Ib. 6

“But ‘glory’ doesn’t mean ‘a nice knockdown argument,’” Alice objected.

“When I use a word,” Humpty
 Dumpty said, in rather a scornful tone, “it means just what I choose it to mean — neither more nor less.”

“The question is,” said Alice, “whether you can make words mean so many different things.”

“The question is,” said Humpty Dumpty, “which is to be master — that’s all.”

The white officers, taking life and honor in their hands, cast in their lot with men of a despised race unproved in war, and risked death as inciters of servile insurrection if taken prisoners, besides encountering all the common perils of camp march and battle.

The black rank and file volunteered when disaster clouded the Union cause, served without pay for eighteen months till given that of white troops, faced threatened enslavement if captured, were brave in action, patient under heavy and dangerous labors, and cheerful amid hardships and privations.

Together they gave to the nation and the world undying proof that Americans of African descent possess the pride, courage, and devotion of the patriot soldier. One hundred and eighty thousand such Americans enlisted under the Union flag in 1863–1865.

CHARLES HENRY WEBB

1834-1905

Friends I have had both old and young,

And ale we drank and songs we sung:

Enough you know when this is said,

That, one and all—they died in bed.

In bed they died and I'll not go

Where all my friends have perished so.

Dum Vivimus Vigilamus, st. 1

That 'tis well to be off with the old

Before one is on with the new

Has somehow passed into a proverb,¹

¹ It's gude to be merry and wise,
It's gude to be honest and true;

But who follows its teaching may rue.
Proverbium Sap, st. 1

The rare few, who, early in life, have rid themselves of the friendship of the many.

The Gentle Art of Making Enemies [1890], dedication

To say of a picture, as is often said in its praise, that it shows great and earnest labor, is to say that it is incomplete and unfit for view.

Ib. Propositions, 2

Industry in art is a necessity — not a virtue — and any evidence of the same, in the production, is a blemish, not a quality; a proof, not of achievement, but of absolutely insufficient work, for work alone will efface the footsteps of work.²

Ib.

The masterpiece should appear as the flower to the painter — perfect in its bud as in its bloom — with no reason

It's gude to be off with the old love,
 Before you are on with the new.

¹ In Whistler's lawsuit for libel. Ruskin had written of Whistler's *Nocturne in Black and impudence before now; but never expected to hear a coxcomb ask two hundred guineas for flinging a pot of paint in the public's face." —

 JOHN RUSKIN, Fors Clavigera, Letter 79 [1877]

² Ars est celare artem [Art lies in concealing art]. — Latin proverb

to explain its presence — no mission to fulfill — a joy to the artist, a delusion to the philanthropist — a puzzle to the botanist — an accident of sentiment and alliteration to the literary man.

 Enemies, Propositions, 2*

Art should be independent of all claptrap — should stand alone, and appeal to the artistic sense of eye and ear, without confounding this with emotions entirely foreign to it, as devotion, pity, love, patriotism, and the like. All these have no kind of concern with it.

Ib.

The imitator is a poor kind of creature. If the man who paints only the tree, or flower, or other surface he sees before him were an artist, the king of artists would be the photographer. It is for the artist to do something beyond this: in portrait painting to put on canvas something more than the face the model wears for that one day; to paint the man, in short; as well as his features.

Ib.

One cannot continually disappoint a

ANDREW CARNEGIE

1835-1919

The problem of our age is the proper administration of wealth, so that the ties of brotherhood may still bind together the rich and poor in harmonious relationship.

Wealth [North American Review, June 1889]

While the law [of competition] may be sometimes hard for the individual, it is best for the race, because it insures the survival of the fittest in every department. We accept and welcome, therefore, as conditions to which we must accommodate ourselves, great inequality of environment, the concentration of business, industrial and commercial, in the hands of a few, and the law of competition between these, as being not only beneficial, but essential for the future progress of the race.

Ib.

Upon the sacredness of property civilization itself depends — the right of the laborer to his hundred dollars in the savings bank, and equally the legal right of the millionaire to his millions.

Ib.

Surplus wealth is a sacred trust which its possessor is bound to administer in his lifetime for the good of the community.

Ib.

Those who would administer wisely must, indeed, be wise, for one of the serious obstacles to the improvement of our race is indiscriminate charity.

Ib.

Thus is the problem of Rich and Poor to be solved. The law of accumulation will be left free; the laws of distribution free. Individualism will continue, but the millionaire will be but a trustee of the poor; entrusted for a season with a great part of the increased wealth of the community, but administering it for the community far better than it could or would have done for itself.¹

Wealth

The man who dies . . . rich dies disgraced.

Ib.

Such, in my opinion, is the true Gospel concerning Wealth, obedience to which is destined some day to solve the problem of the Rich and the Poor, and to bring "Peace on earth, among men Good Will."

The blessings-of-civilization trust, wisely and cautiously administered, is a daisy. There is more money in it, more territory, more sovereignty, and other kinds of emolument, than there is in any other game that is played. But Christendom . . . has been so eager to get every stake that appeared on the green cloth, that the people who sit in darkness¹ have noticed it . . . and have become suspicious of the blessings of civilization.

Memory

It was very pleasant to me to get a letter from you the other day. Perhaps I should have found it pleasanter if I had been able to decipher it. I don't think that I mastered anything beyond the date (which I knew) and the signature (which I guessed at). There's a singular and a perpetual charm in a letter of yours; it never grows old, it never loses its novelty. . . . Other letters are read and thrown away and forgotten, but yours are kept forever — unread. One of them will last a reasonable man a lifetime.

The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Ib. chorus, st. 1

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers,

Maiden most perfect, lady of light,

With a noise of winds and many rivers,

With a clamor of waters, and with might;

Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet,

Over the splendor and speed of thy feet,

For the faint east quickens, the wan
west shivers,

Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night. Ib. st. 2

For winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snows and sins;

The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins;

And time remembered is grief forgotten,

And frosts are slain and flowers begot-
ten,

And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the spring begins.

Atalanta in Calydon, chorus, st. 4

Before the beginning of years
There came to the making of man

Time, with a gift of tears;

Grief, with a glass that ran;

Pleasure, with pain for leaven;

Summer, with flowers that fell;

Remembrance fallen from heaven,

And madness risen from hell;

Strength without hands to smite;

Love that endures for a breath;

Night, the shadow of light,

And life, the shadow of death.

Ib. chorus, st. 1

Eyesight and speech they wrought

For the veils of the soul therein,

A time for labor and thought,

A time to serve and to sin;¹

They gave him light in his ways,

And love, and a space for delight,

And beauty and length of days,

And night, and sleep in the night.

His speech is a burning fire;

With his lips he travaileth;

In his heart is a blind desire,

In his eyes foreknowledge of death;

He weaves, and is clothed with derision;

Sows, and he shall not reap;

His life is a watch or a vision

Between a sleep and a sleep.

Ib. st. 3

We have seen thee, O Love, thou art fair; thou art goodly, O Love.

Ib. chorus

For words divide and rend;

But silence is most noble till the end.

Ib.

O wise among women, and wisest,
Our Lady of Pain.

The desire that outruns the delight.

Ib. st. 14

Despair the twin-born of devotion.

Ib.

I have passed from the outermost portal

To the shrine where a sin is a prayer.

Ib. st. 17

For the crown of our life as it closes

Is darkness, the fruit there of dust;

No thorns go as deep as a rose's,

And love is more cruel than lust.

Time turns the old days to derision,

Our loves into corpses or wives;

And marriage and death and division

Make barren our lives. Ib. st. 20

What ailed us, O gods, to desert you

For creeds that refuse and restrain?

Come down and redeem us from virtue,

Our Lady of Pain.

Ib. st. 35

Lo, this is she that was the world's delight.

Laus Veneris [1866], st. 3

Ah, yet would God this flesh of mine might be

Where air might wash and long leaves cover me;

Where tides of grass break into foam of flowers,

Or where the wind's feet shine along the sea. Ib. st. 14

What I would have done for the least word said.

I had wrung life dry for your lips to drink,

Broken it up for your daily bread.
The Triumph of Time [1866],
st. 12

At the door of life, by the gate of breath,
There are worse things waiting for men than death. Ib. st. 20

I will go back to the great sweet mother,
Mother and lover of men, the sea.
Ib. st. 33

I shall never be friends again with roses;
I shall loathe the sweet tunes. Ib. st. 45

Marvelous mercies and infinite love.
Les Noyades [1866], st. 1

I am sick of singing; the bays burn deep and chafe: I am fain
To rest a little from praise and grievous pleasure and pain.

Hymn to Proserpine: After the Proclamation in Rome of the Christian Faith [1866]

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; 1 the world has grown gray from thy breath;

We have drunken of things Lethean, and fed on the fullness of death.

Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day;

But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.

Sleep, shall we sleep after all? for the world is not sweet in the end;

For the old faiths loosen and fall, the new years ruin and rend. Ib.

I shall die as my fathers died, and sleep
as they sleep; even so.

For the glass of the years is brittle

For there is no God found stronger

Hymn to Proserpine

If you loved me ever so little,
I could bear the bonds that gall,
I could dream the bonds were brittle;
You do not love me at all.
Satia Te Sanguine [1866], st. 1

While he lives let a man be glad,
For none hath joy of his death.
A Lamentation [1866]. I, st. 4

If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,
Our lives would grow together
In sad or singing weather.
A Match [1866], st. 1

If you were April's lady,
And I were lord in May. Ib. st. 5

If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain,
We'd hunt down love together,
Pluck out his flying feather,
And teach his feet a measure,
And find his mouth a rein. Ib. st. 6

For in the time we know not of Did fate begin
Weaving the web of days that wove
Your doom, Faustine.
Faustine [1866], st. 24

Take hand and part with laughter;
Touch lips and part with tears;
Once more and no more after,
Whatever comes with years.
Rococo [1866], st. 1

Forget that I remember,
And dream that I forget. Ib. st. 2

The burden of long living. Thou shalt fear

Waking, and sleeping mourn upon thy bed;

And say at night "Would God the day were here,"

And say at dawn "Would God the day were dead." ¹

Here, where the world is quiet;
Here, where all trouble seems Dead winds' and spent waves' riot
In doubtful dreams of dreams.

The Garden of Proserpine
[1866], st. 1

I am tired of tears and laughter,
And men that laugh and weep;
Of what may come hereafter
For men that sow and reap:
I am weary of days and hours,
Blown buds of barren flowers,
Desires and dreams and powers
And everything but sleep.

Ib. st. 2

We are not sure of sorrow,
And joy was never sure. Ib. st. 10

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving Whatever gods may be
That no life lives forever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.¹

Ib. st. 11

Ah that such sweet things should be fleet,

Such fleet things sweet!
Félice [1866], st. 22

Those eyes the greenest of things blue,
The bluest of things gray. Ib. st. 24

I remember the way we parted,
The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted
And knew we should both forget.

An Interlude [1866], st. 11

¹ No matter how long the river, the river will reach the sea. — EUGENE FITCH WARE ("IRON-QUILL") [1841-1911], The Blizzard

And the best and the worst of this is That neither is most to blame,
If you have forgotten my kisses
And I have forgotten your name.

An Interlude, st. 14

And through the trumpet of a child of Rome

Rang the pure music of the flutes of Greece.

Song for the Centenary of Walter Savage Landor [1866],
st. 17

I am that which began;
Out of me the years roll;
Out of me God and man;
I am equal and whole;
God changes, and man, and the form of them bodily; I am the soul.

Hertha [1871], st. 1

Before ever land was,
Before ever the sea,
Or soft hair of the grass,
Or fair limbs of the tree,
Or the flesh-colored fruit of my branches, I was, and thy soul was in me. Ib. st. 2

A creed is a rod,
And a crown is of night;
But this thing is God,
To be man with thy might,
To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit, and to live out thy life as the light. Ib. st. 15

In the gray beginning of years, in the twilight of things that began,
The word of the earth in the ears of the world, was it God? was it man? Hymn of Man [1871]

Ask nothing more of me, sweet,
All I can give you I give;
Heart of my heart, were it more,
More would be laid at your feet:
Love that should help you to live,
Song that should spur you to soar.

The Oblation [1871], st. 1

It is long since Mr. Carlyle expressed

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, JR.

1841-1935

The life of the law has not been logic: it has been experience.

The Common Law [1881]

The law embodies the story of a nation's development through many centuries, and it cannot be dealt with as if it contained only the axioms and corollaries of a book of mathematics. Ib.

I think that, as life is action and passion, it is required of a man that he should share the passion and action of his time at peril of being judged not to have lived.

Memorial Day Address [1884]

Through our great good fortune, in our youth our hearts were touched with fire. Ib.

The Law, wherein, as in a magic mirror, we see reflected not only our own lives, but the lives of all men that have been! When I think on this majestic theme, my eyes dazzle.¹

I say to you in all sadness of conviction, that to think great thoughts you must be heroes as well as idealists.

The Profession of the Law

him will be moving to the measure of his thought—the subtle rapture of a postponed power, which the world knows not because it has no external trappings, but which to his prophetic vision is more real than that which commands an army.

The Profession of the Law

The prophecies of what the courts will do in fact, and nothing more pretentious, are what I mean by the law.

The Path of the Law [1897]

Certainty generally is illusion, and repose is not the destiny of man. Ib.

The remoter and more general aspects of the law are those which give it universal interest. It is through them that you not only become a great master in your calling, but connect your subject with the universe and catch an echo of the infinite, a glimpse of its unfathomable process, a hint of the universal law. Ib.

The rule of joy and the law of duty seem to me all one.

Speech at Bar Association Dinner, Boston [1900]

Life is an end in itself, and the only question as to whether it is worth living is whether you have enough of it.¹ Ib.

Letter to William James [1907]

The Class of '61 [Speeches, 1913]

I learned in the regiment and in the class the conclusion, at least, of what I think the best service that we can do for our country and for ourselves: To see so far as one may, and to feel the great forces that are behind every detail . . . to hammer out as compact and solid a piece of work as one can, to try to make it first rate, and to leave it unadvertised. Ib.

The only prize much cared for by the powerful is power. The prize of the general is not a bigger tent, but command. Law and the Court [1913]

Judges are apt to be naïf, simple-minded men, and they need something of Mephistopheles. We too need education in the obvious—to learn to transcend our own convictions and to leave room for much that we hold dear to be done away with short of revolution by the orderly change of law. Ib.

I do not think the United States would come to an end if we lost our power to declare an Act of Congress void. I do think the Union would be imperiled if we could not make that declaration as to the laws of the several states. Ib.

The attacks upon the Court are merely an expression of the unrest that seems to wonder vaguely whether law and order pay. When the ignorant are taught to doubt, they do not know what they safely may believe.

Law and the Court

I do not think we need trouble ourselves with the thought that my view depends upon differences of degree. The whole law does so as soon as it is civilized.

LeRoy Fibre Co. v. C., M. & St. P. Ry., 232 U.S. 340, 354 [1914]

I recognize without hesitation that judges do and must legislate, but they can do so only interstitially; they are confined from molar to molecular motions.

Southern Pacific Co. v. Jensen, 244 U.S. 205, 221, [1917]

The common law is not a brooding omnipresence in the sky but the articulate voice of some sovereign or quasi-sovereign that can be identified.

Ib. 222

Certitude is not the test of certainty.

Natural Law [1918]

The most stringent protection of free speech would not protect a man in falsely shouting fire in a theater and causing a panic. . . . The question in every case is whether the words used are used in such circumstances and are of such a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that Congress has a right to prevent.

Schenck v. United States, 249 U.S. 47 [1919]

When men have realized that time has upset many fighting faiths, they may come to believe even more than they believe the very foundations of their own conduct that the ultimate good desired is better reached by free trade in ideas—that the best test of truth is the power of the thought to get itself accepted in the competition of the market, and that truth is the only ground upon which their wishes safely can be carried out. That at any rate is the theory of our Constitution. It is an experiment, as all life is an experiment.

Abrams v. United States, 250 U.S. 616, 630 [1919]

I dare say that I have worked off my fundamental formula on you that the chief end of man is to frame general propositions and that no general proposition is worth a damn.

New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, 256 U.S. 345, 349 [1921]

Buck v. Bell, 274 U.S. 200, 207 [1927]

But if we are to yield to fashionable conventions, it seems to me that theaters are as much devoted to public use as anything well can be. We have not that respect for art that is one of the glories of France. But to many the superfluous is the necessary,¹ and it seems to me that Government does not go beyond its sphere in attempting to make life livable for them.

Tyson & Bro. v. Banton, 273 U.S. 418, 447 [1927]

The power to tax is not the power to destroy while this Court sits.²

Panhandle Oil Co. v. Knox, 277 U.S. 223 [1928]

Olmstead v. United States, 277
U.S. 438, 470 [1928]

If there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us but freedom for the thought that we hate.

United States v. Schwimmer,

The riders in a race do not stop short when they reach the goal. There is a little finishing canter before coming to a standstill. There is time to hear the kind voice of friends and to say to one's self: "The work is done." But just as one says that, the answer comes: "The race is over, but the work never is done while the power to work remains." The canter that brings you to a standstill need not be only coming to rest. It cannot be, while you still live. For to live is to function. That is all there is in living.

A Sacramento newspaper banteringly identified him with the outlaw and the name Joaquin clung to him. Miller accepted it and used it in the title of his first book and thereafter.

A capital ship for an ocean trip
Was the Walloping Window Blind —
No gale that blew dismayed her crew
Or troubled the captain's mind.
The man at the wheel was taught to feel

Contempt for the wildest blow,
And it often appeared, when the weather had cleared,
That he'd been in his bunk below.

WILLIAM JAMES

1842-1910

I have often thought that the best way to define a man's character would be to seek out the particular mental or moral attitude in which, when it came upon him, he felt himself most deeply and intensely active and alive. At such moments there is a voice inside which speaks and says: "This is the real me!"

The Letters of William James, vol. I, p. 199, to Mrs. James [1878]

Nothing so fatiguing as the eternal hanging on of an uncompleted task.

Ib. p. 249, to Carl Stumpf [January 1, 1886]

The difference between the first- and second-best things in art absolutely seems to escape verbal definition — it is a matter of a hair, a shade, an inward quiver of some kind — yet what miles away in the point of preciousness!

Ib. II, p. 87, to Henry Rutgers Marshall [February 7, 1899]

Most people live, whether physically, intellectually or morally, in a very restricted circle of their potential being. They make use of a very small portion of their possible consciousness, and of their soul's resources in general, much like a man who, out of his whole bodily organism, should get into a habit of using and moving only his little finger. Great emergencies and crises show us how much greater our vital resources are than we had supposed.¹

Ib. p. 253, to W. Lutoslawski [May 6, 1906]

The moral flabbiness born of the exclusive worship of the bitch-goddess SUCCESS. That — with the squalid cash interpretation put on the word success — is our national disease.

tive agent. It alone is what keeps us all within the bounds of ordinance.

The Principles of Psychology
[1890], ch. 4

There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision. Ib.

Keep the faculty of effort alive in you by a little gratuitous exercise every day. That is, be systematically ascetic or heroic in little unnecessary points, do every day or two something for no other reason than that you would rather not do it, so that when the hour of dire need draws nigh, it may find you not unnerved and untrained to stand the test. Ib.

The hell to be endured hereafter, of which theology tells, is no worse than the hell we make for ourselves in this world by habitually fashioning our characters in the wrong way. Ib.

We are spinning our own fates, good or evil, and never to be undone. Every smallest stroke of virtue or of vice leaves its never so little scar . . . Nothing we ever do is, in strict scientific literalness, wiped out. Ib.

Consciousness . . . does not appear to itself chopped up in bits. . . . A "river" or a "stream" are the metaphors by which it is most naturally described. In talking of it hereafter, let us call it the stream of thought, of consciousness, or of subjective life. Ib. 9

As we take, in fact, a general view of the wonderful stream of our consciousness, what strikes us first is this different pace of its parts. Like a bird's life, it seems to be made of an alternation of flights and perchings. Ib.

As the brain changes are continuous, so do all these consciousnesses melt into each other like dissolving views. Properly they are but one protracted consciousness, one unbroken stream. Ib.

The last peculiarity of consciousness to which attention is to be drawn in this first rough description of its stream is that . . . it is always interested more in one part of its object [thought] than in another, and welcomes and rejects, or chooses, all the while it thinks.

The Principles of Psychology, ch. 4

An act has no ethical quality whatever unless it be chosen out of several all equally possible. Ib.

In its widest possible sense, however, a man's Self is the sum total of all that he can call his, not only his body and his psychic powers, but his clothes and his house, his wife and children, his ancestors and friends, his reputation and works, his lands and horses, and yacht and bank account. All these things give him the same emotions. If they wax and prosper, he feels triumphant; if they dwindle and die away, he feels cast down. Ib. 10

So our self-feeling in this world depends entirely on what we back ourselves to be and do. Ib.

Creatures extremely low in the intellectual scale may have conception. All that is required is that they should recognize the same experience again. A polyp would be a conceptual thinker if a feeling of "Hello! thingumbob again!" ever flitted through its mind. Ib. 12

Let anyone try, I will not say to arrest, but to notice or attend to, the present moment of time. One of the most baffling experiences occurs. Where is it, this present? It has melted in our grasp, fled ere we could touch it, gone in the instant of becoming. Ib. 15

Genius . . . means little more than the faculty of perceiving in an unhabitual way. Ib. 19

The impulse to take life strivingly is indestructible in the race. Ib. 21

The art of being wise is the art of knowing what to overlook. Ib. 22

The more rational statement is that we feel sorry because we cry, angry because we strike, afraid because we tremble, and not that we cry, strike, or tremble, because we are sorry, angry, or fearful, as the case may be. Without the bodily states following on the perception, the latter would be purely cognitive in form, pale, colorless, destitute of emotional warmth.

A thing is important if anyone think it important. Ib. 28, note

In the deepest heart of all of us there is a corner in which the ultimate mystery of things works sadly.

The Will to Believe [1897]. Is Life Worth Living?

Need and struggle are what excite and inspire us; our hour of triumph is what brings the void. Not the Jews of the captivity, but those of the days of Solomon's glory are those from whom the pessimistic utterances in our Bible come. Ib.

It is only by risking our persons from one hour to another that we live at all. And often enough our faith beforehand in an uncertified result is the only thing that makes the result come true.

Ib.

This life is worth living, we can say, since it is what we make it, from the moral point of view.¹ Ib.

If this life be not a real fight, in which something is eternally gained for the universe by success, it is no better than a game of private theatricals from which one may withdraw at will. But it feels like a real fight. Ib.

Be not afraid of life. Believe that life is worth living, and your belief will help create the fact. Ib. p. 62

Man's chief difference from the brutes lies in the exuberant excess of his subjective propensities — his pre-eminence over them simply and solely in the number and in the fantastic and unnecessary character of his wants, physical, moral, aesthetic, and intellectual. Had his whole life not been a quest for the superfluous, he would never have established himself as inextinguishably as he has done in the necessary.

The Will to Believe. Reflex Action and Theism

All the higher, more penetrating ideals are revolutionary. They present themselves far less in the guise of effects of past experience than in that of probable causes of future experience.

Ib. The Moral Philosopher and the Moral Life

There is but one unconditional commandment, which is that we should seek incessantly, with fear and trembling, so to vote and to act as to bring about the very largest total universe of good which we can see. Ib.

An unlearned carpenter of my acquaintance once said in my hearing: "There is very little difference between one man and another; but what little there is, is very important." This distinction seems to me to go to the root of the matter.

Ib. The Importance of Individuals

Wherever you are it is your own friends who make your world.

From RALPH BARTON PERRY, The Thought and Character of William James [1935], vol. II [1899], ch. 91, conclusion

Tell him to live by yes and no — yes to everything good, no to everything bad. Ib.

Religion . . . is a man's total reaction upon life. Ib.

We can act as if there were a God; feel as if we were free; consider Nature as if she were full of special designs; lay plans as if we were to be immortal; and we find then that these words do make a genuine difference in our moral life.

The Varieties of Religious Experience. Lecture 3

There is no worse lie than a truth misunderstood by those who hear it.

Ib. Lectures 14 and 15

The philosophy which is so important in each of us is not a technical matter; it is our more or less dumb sense of what life honestly and deeply means. It is only partly got from books; it is our individual way of just seeing and feeling the total push and pressure of the cosmos.

Pragmatism [1907]. Lecture 1

I myself believe that the evidence for God lies primarily in inner personal experiences.

Ib. Lecture 3

Our minds thus grow in spots; and like grease spots, the spots spread. But we let them spread as little as possible: we keep unaltered as much of our old knowledge, as many of our old prejudices and beliefs, as we can. We patch and tinker more than we renew. The novelty soaks in; it stains the ancient mass; but it is also tinged by what absorbs it.

Ib. Lecture 5

Truth happens to an idea. It becomes true, is made true by events. Its verity is in fact an event, a process: the process namely of its verifying itself, its verification. Its validity is the process of its valid-ation.

Ib. Lecture 6

Pluralism lets things really exist in the each-form or distributively. Monism thinks that the all-form or collective-unit form is the only form that is rational.

A Pluralistic Universe [1909]. Lecture 8

What we really need the poet's and orator's help to keep alive in us is not . . . the common and gregarious courage which Robert Shaw showed when he marched with you, men of the Seventh Regiment. It is that more lonely courage which he showed when he dropped his warm commission in the glorious Second to head your dubious fortunes, Negroes of the Fifty-fourth. That lonely kind of courage (civic courage, as we call it in times of peace) is the kind of valor to which the monuments of nations should most of all be reared.¹

Memories and Studies [1911]. Robert Gould Shaw: Oration Upon the Unveiling of the Shaw Monument [May 31, 1897]

The deadliest enemies of nations are not their foreign foes; they always dwell within their borders. And from these internal enemies civilization is always in need of being saved. The nation blessed above all nations is she in whom the civic genius of the people does the saving day by day, by acts without external picturesqueness; by speaking, writing, voting reasonably; by smiting corruption swiftly; by good temper between parties; by the people knowing true men when they see them, and preferring them as leaders to rabid partisans or empty quacks.

Ib.

Democracy is still upon its trial. The civic genius of our people is its only bulwark.

Ib.

So long as antimilitarists propose no substitute for war's disciplinary function, no moral equivalent of war, analogous, as one might say, to the mechanical equivalent of heat, so long they fail to realize the full inwardness of the situation.

Ib. The Moral Equivalent of War

Our colleges ought to have lit up in us a lasting relish for the better kind of man, a loss of appetite for mediocrities.

Ib. The Social Value of the College-Bred

Real culture lives by sympathies and admirations, not by dislikes and disdains; under all misleading wrappings it pounces unerringly upon the human core.

Memories and Studies. The Social Value of the College-Bred

The "through-and-through" universe seems to suffocate me with its infallible impeccable all-pervasiveness. . . . It seems too buttoned-up and white-chokered and clean-shaven a thing to speak for the vast slow-breathing unconscious Kosmos with its dread abysses and its unknown tides.

Letter [1872] quoted in PERCY LUBBOCK, Letters of Henry James [1920], vol. I, Biographical note

It takes a great deal of history to produce a little literature.

Hawthorne [1879], ch. 1

Whatever question there may be of his [Thoreau's] talent, there can be none, I think, of his genius. It was a slim and crooked one, but it was eminently personal. He was unperfect, unfinished, inartistic; he was worse than provincial — he was parochial. Ib. 4

The Madonna of the Future

The Portrait of a Lady [1881]

The real offense, as she ultimately perceived, was her having a mind of her own at all. Her mind was to be his — attached to his own like a small garden plot to a deer park. Ib.

You were ground in the very mill of the conventional! Ib.

The only reason for the existence of a novel is that it does attempt to represent life. The Art of Fiction [1888]

The only obligation to which in advance we may hold a novel, without incurring the accusation of being arbitrary, is that it be interesting. Ib.

The advantage, the luxury, as well as the torment and responsibility of the novelist, is that there is no limit to what he may attempt as an executant — no limit to his possible experiments, efforts, discoveries, successes.

The Art of Fiction

The power to guess the unseen from the seen, to trace the implications of things, to judge the whole piece by the pattern, the condition of feeling life in general so completely that you are well on your way to knowing any particular corner of it — this cluster of gifts may almost be said to constitute experience. . . . If experience consists of impressions, it may be said that impressions are experience. . . . Therefore, if I should certainly say to a novice, "Write from experience and experience only," I should feel that this was rather a tantalizing monition if I were not careful immediately to add, "Try to be one of the people on whom nothing is lost." Ib.

We must grant the artist his subject, his idea, his donnée: our criticism is applied only to what he makes of it. . . . If we pretend to respect the artist at all, we must allow him his freedom of choice, in the face, in particular cases, of innumerable presumptions that the choice will not fructify. Art derives a considerable part of its beneficial exercise from flying in the face of presumptions. Ib.

There are few things more exciting to me . . . than a psychological reason. Ib.

The practice of "reviewing" . . . in general has nothing in common with the art of criticism.

Criticism [1893]

The critical sense is so far from frequent that it is absolutely rare, and the possession of the cluster of qualities that minister to it is one of the highest distinctions. . . . In this light one sees the critic as the real helper of the artist, a torchbearing outrider, the interpreter, the brother. . . . Just in proportion as he is sentient and restless, just in proportion as he reacts and reciprocates and penetrates, is the critic a valuable instrument.

Criticism

However incumbent it may be on most of us to do our duty, there is, in spite of a thousand narrow dogmatisms, nothing in the world that anyone is under the least obligation to like — not even (one braces one's self to risk the declaration) a particular kind of writing.

Flaubert [1893]

I caught him, yes, I held him — it may be imagined with what passion; but at the end of a minute I began to feel what it truly was that I held. We were alone with the quiet day, and his little heart, dispossessed, had stopped.

The Turn of the Screw [1898], ending

Live all you can; it's a mistake not to. It doesn't so much matter what you do in particular, so long as you have had your life. If you haven't had that what have you had? . . . What one loses one loses; make no mistake about that. . . . The right time is any time that one is still so lucky as to have. . . . Live!

The Ambassadors [1903], bk. V,
ch. 2

Really, universally, relations stop nowhere, and the exquisite problem of the artist is eternally but to draw, by a geometry of his own, the circle within which they shall happily appear to do so.

Prefaces [1907-1909]. Roderick Hudson

There is, I think, no more nutritive or suggestive truth . . . than that of the perfect dependence of the "moral" sense of a work of art on the amount of felt life concerned in producing it. The question comes back thus, obviously, to the kind and the degree of the artist's prime sensibility, which is the soil out of which his subject springs.

Prefaces. The Portrait of a Lady

To see deep difficulty braved is at any time, for the really addicted artist, to feel almost even as a pang the beautiful incentive, and to feel it verily in such sort as to wish the danger intensified. The difficulty most worth tackling can only be for him, in these conditions, the greatest the case permits of.

No themes are so human as those that reflect for us, out of the confusion of life, the close connection of bliss and bale, of the things that help with the things that hurt, so dangling before us forever that bright hard medal, of so strange an alloy, one face of which is somebody's right and ease and the other somebody's pain and wrong.

Ib. What Maisie Knew

The effort really to see and really to represent is no idle business in face of the constant force that makes for muddlement. The great thing is indeed that the muddled state too is one of the very sharpest of the realities, that it also has color and form and character, has often in fact a broad and rich comicality.

Letter to Miss M. Betham Edwards [January 5, 1912]

We must know, as much as possible, in our beautiful art . . . what we are talking about — and the only way to know is to have lived and loved and cursed and floundered and enjoyed and suffered. I think I don't regret a single "excess" of my responsive youth — I only regret, in my chilled age, certain occasions and possibilities I didn't embrace.

Letter to Hugh Walpole
[August 21, 1913]

I still, in presence of life . . . have reactions — as many as possible. . . . It's, I suppose, because I am that queer monster, the artist, an obstinate finality, an inexhaustible sensibility. Hence the reactions — appearances, memories, many things, go on playing upon it with consequences that I note and "enjoy" (grim word!) noting. It all takes doing — and I do. I believe I shall do yet again — it is still an act of life.

Letter to Henry Adams
[March 21, 1914]

The effect, if not the prime office, of criticism is to make our absorption and our enjoyment of the things that feed the mind as aware of itself as possible, since that awareness quickens the mental demand, which thus in turn wanders further and further for pasture. This action on the part of the mind practically amounts to a reaching out for the reasons of its interest, as only by its ascertaining them can the interest grow more various. This is the very education of our imaginative life.

The New Novel [1914]

It is art that makes life, makes interest, makes importance, for our consideration and application of these things, and I know of no substitute whatever for the force and beauty of its process.

No doubt my poetry errs on the side of oddness. I hope in time to have a more balanced and Miltonic style. But as air, melody, is what strikes me most of all in music, and design in painting, so design, pattern, or what I am in the habit of calling inscape is what I above all aim at in poetry. Now it is the virtue of design, pattern, or inscape to be distinctive, and it is the vice of distinctiveness to become queer. This vice I cannot have escaped.

Nothing will sustain you more potently than the power to recognize in your humdrum routine, as perhaps it may be thought, the true poetry of life — the poetry of the commonplace, of the ordinary man, of the plain, toil-worn woman, with their loves and their joys, their sorrows and their griefs.

From HARVEY CUSHING, Life of Sir William Osler, vol. I, ch. 24
[The Student Life]

I have three personal ideals. One, to do the day's work well and not to bother about tomorrow. . . . The second ideal has been to act the Golden Rule, as far as in me lay, toward my professional brethren and toward the patients committed to my care. And the third has been to cultivate such a measure of equanimity as would enable me to bear success with humility, the affection of my friends without pride, and to be ready when the day of sorrow and grief came to meet it with the courage befitting a man.

The trade unions are the legitimate outgrowth of modern societary and industrial conditions. . . . They were born of the necessity of workers to protect and defend themselves from encroachment, injustice and wrong. . . .
To protect the workers in their inalienable rights to a higher and better life;
to protect them, not only as equals before the law, but also in their health, their homes, their firesides, their liberties as men, as workers, and as citizens; to overcome and conquer prejudices and antagonism; to secure to them the right to life, and the opportunity to maintain that life; the right to be full sharers in the abundance which is the result of their brain and brawn, and the civilization of which they are the founders and the mainstay; to this the workers are entitled. . . . The attainment of these is the glorious mission of the trade unions. Speech [1898]

Let every man honor and love the land of his birth and the race from which he springs and keep their memory green. It is a pious and honorable duty. But let us have done with British-Americans and Irish-Americans and German-Americans, and so on, and all be Americans. . . . If a man is going to be an American at all let him be so without any qualifying adjectives; and if he is going to be something else, let him drop the word American from his personal description.

traces it to John Motley Morehead [1796-1866], who was Governor of North Carolina 1841-1845.
He was visited by James H. Hammond [1807-

ment, and when the latter waxed hot, Governor Morehead was reported by a servant to have exclaimed: "It's a long time between drinks."

To be honest, to be kind — to earn a little and spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not to be embittered, capitulation — above all, on the same grim condition, to keep friends with himself — here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

1854-1912

The advance of science is not comparable to the changes of a city, where old edifices are pitilessly torn down to give place to new, but to the continuous evolution of zoologic types which develop ceaselessly and end by becoming unrecognizable to the common sight, but where an expert eye finds always traces of the prior work of the past centuries.

LOUIS D. BRANDEIS

1856-1941

Those who won our independence believed that the final end of the State was to make men free to develop their faculties; and that in its government the deliberative forces should prevail over the arbitrary. They valued liberty both as an end and as a means. They believed liberty to be the secret of happiness and courage to be the secret of liberty.²

Whitney v. California, 274 U.S.

New State Ice Co. v. Liebmann,
285 U.S. 262, 311 [1932]

Stare decisis is usually the wise policy, because in most matters it is more important that the applicable rule of law be settled than that it be settled right. . . . But in cases involving the Federal Constitution, where correction through legislative action is practically impossible, this Court has often overruled its earlier decisions. The Court bows to the lessons of experience and the force of better reasoning, recognizing that the process of trial and error, so fruitful in the physical sciences, is appropriate also in the judicial function.

Burnet v. Coronado Oil and Gas Co., 285 U.S. 393, 406 [1932]

There is in most Americans some spark of idealism, which can be fanned into a flame. It takes sometimes a divining rod to find what it is; but when found, and that means often, when disclosed to the owners, the results are often extraordinary.

On his seventieth birthday
[1926]; from LIONEL TRILLING, The Liberal Imagination

The voice of the intellect is a soft one, but it does not rest until it has gained a hearing. Ultimately, after endlessly repeated rebuffs, it succeeds. This is one of the few points in which one may be optimistic about the future of mankind, but in itself it signifies not a little. Future of an Illusion [1928]

Analogies prove nothing, that is quite true, but they can make one feel more at home.

New Introductory Lectures on Psychoanalysis [1932]

One might compare the relation of the ego to the id with that between a rider and his horse. The horse provides the locomotor energy, and the rider has the prerogative of determining the goal and of guiding the movements of his powerful mount towards it. But all too often in the relations between the ego and the id we find a picture of the less ideal situation in which the rider is obliged to guide his horse in the direction in which it itself wants to go.

Ib. The Anatomy of the Mental Personality (Lecture 31)

The poor ego has a still harder time of it; it has to serve three harsh masters, and has to do its best to reconcile the claims and demands of all three. . . . The three tyrants are the external world, the superego and the id. Ib.

Where id was, there shall ego be. Ib.

Thinking is an experimental dealing with small quantities of energy, just as a general moves miniature figures over a map before setting his troops in action.

Ib. Anxiety and Instinctual Life
(Lecture 32)

If one wishes to form a true estimate of the full grandeur of religion, one must keep in mind what it undertakes to do for men. It gives them information about the source and origin of the universe, it assures them of protection and final happiness amid the changing vicissitudes of life, and it guides their thoughts and motions by means of precepts which are backed by the whole force of its authority.

New Introductory Lectures on Psychoanalysis. A Philosophy of Life (Lecture 35)

Religion is an attempt to get control over the sensory world, in which we are placed, by means of the wish-world, which we have developed inside us as a result of biological and psychological necessities. Ib.

Religion is an illusion and it derives its strength from the fact that it falls in with our instinctual desires. Ib.

The Mosaic religion had been a Father religion; Christianity became a Son religion. The old God, the Father, took second place; Christ, the Son, stood in His stead, just as in those dark times every son had longed to do.

Moses and Monotheism [1938]

Man found that he was faced with the acceptance of "spiritual" forces, that is to say such forces as cannot be apprehended by the senses, particularly not by sight, and yet having undoubted, even extremely strong, effects. If we may trust to language, it was the movement of the air that provided the image of spirituality, since the spirit borrows its name from the breath of wind (animus, spiritus, Hebrew: ruach = smoke). The idea of the soul was thus born as the spiritual principle in the individual. . . . Now the realm of spirits had opened for man, and he was ready to endow everything in nature with the soul he had discovered in himself. Ib.

A man who has been the indisputable favorite of his mother keeps for life the feeling of a conqueror, that confidence of success that often induces real success.

From ERNEST JONES, Life and Works of Sigmund Freud, vol. I [1953], ch. 1

A Message to Garcia [March 1899]

The man who is anybody and who does anything is surely going to be criticized, vilified, and misunderstood. This is a part of the penalty for greatness, and every great man understands it;

² After the declaration of the Spanish-American War, Andrew Summers Rowan, then Lieutenant, United States Bureau of Military Intelligence, was sent to communicate with General Calixto Garcia. He landed in an open boat near Turquino Peak, April 24, 1898, executed the mission, and brought back information regarding the insurgent army.

Memorial Day Address [1915]

The things that the flag stands for were created by the experiences of a great people. Everything that it stands for was written by their lives. The flag is the embodiment, not of sentiment, but of history. It represents the experi-experiences of those who do and live under that flag.

Address to the U.S. Senate
 [January 22, 1917]

It must be a peace without victory.
 . . . Victory would mean peace forced upon the loser, a victor's terms imposed upon the vanquished. It would be accepted in humiliation, under duress, at an intolerable sacrifice, and would leave a sting, a resentment, a bitter memory upon which terms of peace would rest, not permanently, but only as upon quicksand. Only a peace between equals can last.

Address to the U.S. Senate

Armed neutrality is ineffectual enough at best.

Address to Congress, asking for a declaration of war [April 2, 1917]

The world must be made safe for democracy.² Ib.

It is a fearful thing to lead this great peaceful people into war, into the most terrible and disastrous of all wars, civilization itself seeming to be in the balance. But the right is more precious than peace, and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts — for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own governments, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free. To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. God helping her, she can do no other.

A work that aspires, however humbly, to the condition of art should carry its justification in every line.

The Nigger of the Narcissus
[1898], preface

But the artist appeals to that part of our being which is not dependent on wisdom; to that in us which is a gift and not an acquisition — and, therefore, more permanently enduring. He speaks to our capacity for delight and wonder, to the sense of mystery surrounding our lives: to our sense of pity, and beauty, and pain. Ib.

The ship, a fragment detached from the earth, went on lonely and swift like a small planet. Ib. ch. 2

Goodbye, brothers! You were a good crowd. As good a crowd as ever fisted with wild cries the beating canvas of a heavy foresail; or tossing aloft, invisible in the night, gave back yell for yell to a westerly gale. Ib. 5

The mind of man is capable of anything — because everything is in it, all the past as well as all the future. Ib. II

No fear can stand up to hunger, no patience can wear it out, disgust simply does not exist where hunger is; and as to superstition, beliefs, and what you may call principles, they are less than chaff in a breeze.² Ib.

¹ "Heart of Darkness" is experience . . . but it is experience pushed a little (and only very little) beyond the actual facts of the case for the perfectly legitimate, I believe, purpose of bringing it home to the minds and bosoms of the readers. . . . That somber theme had to be given a sinister resonance, a tonality of its own, a continued vibration that, I hoped, would hang in the air and dwell on the ear after the last note had been struck. — CONRAD, Youth: A Narrative, and Two Other Stories, author's preface

With the exception of the instinct of self-preservation, the propensity for emulation is probably the strongest and most alert and persistent of the economic motives proper.

Ib. 5

Song

To dress, to call, to dine, to break
No canon of the social code,
The little laws that lackeys make,
The futile decalogue of Mode —
How many a soul for these things lives,
With pious passion, grave intent!
While Nature careless-handed gives
The things that are more excellent.

The study of mathematics is apt to commence in disappointment. . . . We are told that by its aid the stars are weighed and the billions of molecules in a drop of water are counted. Yet, like the ghost of Hamlet's father, this great science eludes the efforts of our mental weapons to grasp it.

An Introduction to Mathematics [1911]

All the world over and at all times there have been practical men, absorbed in irreducible and stubborn facts; all the world over and at all times there have been men of philosophic temperament, who have been absorbed in the weaving of general principles.

Science and the Modern World [1925]

Intelligence is quickness to apprehend as distinct from ability, which is capacity to act wisely on the thing apprehended. Ib. p. 135

Our minds are finite, and yet even in these circumstances of finitude we are surrounded by possibilities that are infinite, and the purpose of human life is to grasp as much as we can out of that infinitude. Ib. p. 163

A culture is in its finest flower before it begins to analyze itself. Ib. p. 169

The ideas of Freud² were popularized by people who only imperfectly understood them, who were incapable of the great effort required to grasp them in their relationship to larger truths, and who therefore assigned to them a prominence out of all proportion to their true importance. Ib. p. 211

Art is the imposing of a pattern on experience, and our aesthetic enjoyment in recognition of the pattern.

Ib. p. 228

A philosopher of imposing stature doesn't think in a vacuum. Even his most abstract ideas are, to some extent, conditioned by what is or is not known in the time when he lives. Ib. p. 229

With the sense of sight, the idea communicates the emotion, whereas, with sound, the emotion communicates the idea, which is more direct and therefore more powerful.

Dialogues of Alfred North Whitehead, p. 231

Intellect is to emotion as our clothes are to our bodies: we could not very well have civilized life without clothes, but we would be in a poor way if we had only clothes without bodies.

THAYER

1863-1940

There was ease in Casey's manner as he stepped into his place,

There was pride in Casey's bearing, and a smile on Casey's face,

And when, responding to the cheers, he lightly doffed his hat,

No stranger in the crowd could doubt
'twas Casey at the bat.

Oh! somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright;

The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light;

And somewhere men are laughing and somewhere children shout,

But there is no joy in Mudville — mighty Casey has struck out.

SIR ROGER CASEMENT

1864-1916

Where all your rights become only an accumulated wrong; where men must beg with bated breath for leave to subsist in their own land, to think their own thoughts, to sing their own songs, to garner the fruits of their own labors . . . then surely it is braver, a saner and truer thing, to be a rebel in act and deed against such circumstances as these than tamely to accept it as the natural lot of men.

And nodding by the fire, take down this book.¹

When You Are Old [1893]

How many loved your moments of glad grace,

And loved your beauty, with love false or true,

But one man loved the pilgrim soul in you,

And loved the sorrows of your changing face. Ib.

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,

And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattles made:

Nine bean-rows will I have there, a hive for the honeybee,

And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

And I shall have some peace there, for peace comes dropping slow,

Dropping from the veils of the morning to where the cricket sings;

There midnight's all a glimmer, and noon a purple glow,

And evening full of the linnet's wings.

The Folly of Being Comforted [1904]

Never give all the heart, for love
 Will hardly seem worth thinking of
 To passionate women if it seem Certain, and they never dream
 That it fades out from kiss to kiss;
 For everything that's lovely is
 But a brief, dreamy kind of delight.
Never Give All the Heart [1904]

Better go down upon your marrow-

Towards Break of Day [1921],
st. 3

Turning and turning in the widening gyre

The falcon cannot hear the falconer;

Things fall apart; the center cannot hold;

Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world,

The blood-dimmed tide is loosed, and everywhere

The ceremony of innocence is drowned;

The best lack all conviction, while the worst

Are full of passionate intensity.

sea.

A Prayer for My Daughter
[1921], st. 2

For such,

Being made beautiful overmuch,

Consider beauty a sufficient end,

Lose natural kindness and maybe
The heart-revealing intimacy

That chooses right, and never find a friend.

A Prayer for My Daughter,
st. 3

Ib. st. 7

An intellectual hatred is the worst,
So let her think opinions are accursed.
Have I not seen the loveliest woman born

Out of the mouth of Plenty's horn,
Because of her opinionated mind

Barter that horn and every good

By quiet natures understood

For an old bellows full of angry wind?

Ib. st. 8

That is no country for old men. The young

In one another's arms, birds in the trees

— Those dying generations — at their
song,

The salmon-falls, the mackerel-crowded seas,

Fish, flesh, or fowl, commend all summer long

Whatever is begotten, born, and dies.
Caught in that sensual music all neglect

Monuments of unaging intellect.

Sailing to Byzantium [1928], st. 1

An aged man is but a paltry thing,

A tattered coat upon a stick, unless

Soul clap its hands and sing, and louder sing

For every tatter in its mortal dress.

Ib. st. 2

Consume my heart away; sick with desire
And fastened to a dying animal

It knows not what it is; and gather me
Into the artifice of eternity.

Sailing to Byzantium, st. 3

Once out of nature I shall never take My bodily form from any natural thing,
But such a form as Grecian goldsmiths make

Of hammered gold and gold enameling
To keep a drowsy Emperor awake;
Or set upon a golden bough to sing
To lords and ladies of Byzantium Of what is past, or passing, or to come.¹

Ib. st. 4

What shall I do with this absurdity —
O heart, O troubled heart — this caricature,

Decrepit age that has been tied to me

As to a dog's tail?

Never had I more

Excited, passionate, fantastical
Imagination, nor an ear and eye
That more expected the impossible.

The Tower [1928], I

Does the imagination dwell the most Upon a woman won or a woman lost?

Ib. II, st. 13

Come let us mock at the great
That had such burdens on the mind
And toiled so hard and late
To leave some monument behind,
Nor thought of the leveling wind.

Nineteen Hundred and Nineteen [1928], V

Mock mockers after that
That would not lift a hand maybe
To help good, wise or great
To bar that foul storm out, for we

When such as I cast out remorse
So great a sweetness flows into the breast

We must laugh and we must sing,
We are blest by everything,
Everything we look upon is blest.

Ib. st. 4

But what is Whiggery?
A leveling, rancorous, rational sort of mind

That never looked out of the eye of a saint

Or out of a drunkard's eye.

The Seven Sages [1933]

The moon in a silver bag.

Ib. Those Dancing Days Are Gone, refrain

I gave what other women gave
That stepped out of their clothes,
But when this soul, its body off,
Naked to naked goes,
He it has found shall find therein
What none other knows.

A Woman Young and Old [1933]. A Last Confession,
st. 3

He that sings a lasting song
Thinks in a marrowbone.

A Prayer for Old Age [1935], st. 1

I pray — for fashion's word is out
And prayer comes round again —
That I may seem, though I die old,
A foolish, passionate man. Ib. st. 3

All perform their tragic play,
There struts Hamlet, there is Lear.

Lapis Lazuli [1936-1939]

Heaven blazing into the head:
Tragedy wrought to its uttermost.
Though Hamlet rambles and Lear rages,

And all the drop-scenes drop at once Upon a hundred thousand stages,
It cannot grow by an inch or an ounce.
Ib.

If soul may look and body touch,
Which is the more blest?

The Lady's Second Song [1936-
1939], st. 3

My temptation is quiet.
Here at life's end
Neither loose imagination,

Nor the mill of the mind
Consuming its rat and bone,
Can make the truth known.

An Acre of Grass [1936-1939],
st. 2

Grant me an old man's frenzy, Myself must I remake
Till I am Timon and Lear
Or that William Blake
Who beat upon the wall
Till Truth obeyed his call.

Ib. st. 3

Hurrah for revolution and more can-gar on foot.

The Great Day [1936-
1939], l. 1

You think it horrible that lust and rage

Should dance attention upon my old age;

They were not such a plague when I was young;

What else have I to spur me into
song?

The Spur [1936-1939]

Down the mountain walls
From where Pan's cavern is Intolerable music falls.

Foul goat-head, brutal arm appear,
Belly, shoulder, bum,
Flash fishlike; nymphs and satyrs
Copulate in the foam.

News for the Delphic Oracle
[1936-1939], st. 3

What shall I do for pretty girls
Now my old bawd is dead?

John Kinsella's Lament for Mrs. Mary Moore [1936-1939], refrain

Irish poets, learn your trade,
Sing whatever is well made.

Under Ben Bulben [1936-
1939], V

Under bare Ben Bulben's head

The Chinese people have only family and clan solidarity; they do not have national spirit . . . they are just a heap of loose sand. . . . Other men are the carving knife and serving dish; we are the fish and the meat.

China As a Heap of Loose Sand [1924]

China is now suffering from poverty, not from unequal distribution of wealth. Where there are inequalities of wealth, the methods of Marx can, of course, be used; a class war can be advocated to destroy the inequalities. But in China, where industry is not yet developed, Marx's class war and dictatorship of the proletariat are impracticable.

Reading, Writing and Remembering [1932]

1868-1942

I believe in the United States of America as a Government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic, a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect Union one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its Constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

Defense against charge of sedition [March 23, 1922]

The term Satyagraha was coined by me . . . in order to distinguish it from the movement then going on . . . under the name of Passive Resistance.

Its root meaning is "holding on to truth," hence "force of righteousness." I have also called it love force or soul force. In the application of Satyagraha, I discovered in the earliest stages that pursuit of truth did not permit violence being inflicted on one's opponent, but that he must be weaned from error by patience and sympathy. For what appears truth to the one may appear to be error to the other. And patience means self-suffering. So the doctrine came to mean vindication of truth, not by the infliction of suffering on the opponent, but on one's self.³ Ib.

Vigorous writing is concise. A sentence should contain no unnecessary words, a paragraph no unnecessary sentences, for the same reason that a drawing should have no unnecessary lines and a machine no unnecessary parts. This requires not that the writer make all his sentences short, or that he avoid all detail and treat his subjects only in outline, but that every word tell.

we do not pause to reflect that, even without waiting for that other life, in this life, after a few years we are unfaithful to what we have been, to what we wished to remain immortally.

Remembrance of Things Past.
Cities of the Plain, pt. II

It is often simply from want of the creative spirit that we do not go to the full extent of suffering. And the most terrible reality brings us, with our suffering, the joy of a great discovery, because it merely gives a new and clear form to what we have long been ruminating without suspecting it. Ib.

The bonds that unite another person to ourself exist only in our mind. Memory as it grows fainter relaxes them, and notwithstanding the illusion by which we would fain be cheated and with which, out of love, friendship, politeness, deference, duty, we cheat other people, we exist alone. Man is the creature that cannot emerge from himself, that knows his fellows only in himself; when he asserts the contrary, he is lying. Ib. The Sweet Cheat Gone

We do not succeed in changing things according to our desire, but gradually our desire changes. The situation that we hoped to change because it was intolerable becomes unimportant. We have not managed to surmount the obstacle, as we were absolutely determined to do, but life has taken us round it, led us past it, and then if we turn round to gaze at the remote past, we can barely catch sight of it, so imperceptible has it become. Ib.

There is not a woman in the world the possession of whom is as precious as that of the truths which she reveals to us by causing us to suffer. Ib.

We are healed of a suffering only by experiencing it to the full. Ib.

Happiness is beneficial for the body but it is grief that develops the powers of the mind.

Ib. The Past Recaptured

Only through art can we get outside of ourselves and know another's view of the universe which is not the same as ours and see landscapes which would otherwise have remained unknown to us like the landscapes of the moon. Thanks to art, instead of seeing a single world, our own, we see it multiply until we have before us as many worlds as there are original artists. . . . And many centuries after their core, whether we call it Rembrandt or Vermeer, is extinguished, they continue to send us their special rays.

LEARNED HAND

1872-1961

You may ask what then will become of the fundamental principles of equity and fair play which our constitutions enshrine; and whether I seriously believe that unsupported they will serve merely as counsels of moderation. I do not think that anyone can say what will be left of those principles; I do not know whether they will serve only as counsels; but this much I think I do know — that a society so riven that the spirit of moderation is gone, no court can save; that a society where that spirit flourishes, no court need save; that in a society which evades its responsibility by thrusting upon the courts the nurture of that spirit, that spirit in the end will perish.

Come on now, all you young men, all over the world. You are needed more than ever now to fill the gap of a generation shorn by the war. You have not an hour to lose. You must take your places in life's fighting line. Twenty to twenty-five! These are the years! Don't be content with things as they are. "The earth is yours and the fullness thereof." Enter upon your inheritance, accept your responsibilities. Raise the glorious flags again, advance them upon the new enemies, who constantly gather upon the front of the human army, and have only to be assaulted to be overthrown. Don't take no for an answer, never submit to failure. Do not be fobbed off with mere personal success or acceptance. You will make all kinds of mistakes; but as long as you are generous and true, and also fierce, you cannot hurt the world or even seriously distress her. History with its flickering lamp stumbles along the trail of the past, trying to reconstruct its scenes, to revive its echoes, and kindle with pale gleams the passion of former days. This is no time to speak of the hopes of the future, or the broader world which lies beyond our struggles and our victory. We have to win that world for which lies beyond our struggles and our sacrifices. We have not won it yet. The crisis is upon us. . . . In this strange, terrible world war there is a place for everyone, man and woman, old and young, hale and halt; service in a thousand forms is open. There is no room now for the dilettante, the weakling, for the shirker, or the sluggard. The mine, the factory, the dockyard, the salt sea waves, the fields to till, the home, the hospital, the chair of the scientist, the pulpit of the preacher — from the highest to the humblest tasks, all are of equal honor; all have their part to play.

The Nazi Minister of Enlightenment and Propaganda, Dr. Josef Goebbels [1897-1945], used the phrase "iron curtain" in reference to the U.S.S.R. in Das Reich [February 23, 1945]. Hitler's Minister of Finance, Count Lutz Schwerin von Krosigk, also used it [May 2, 1945].

Churchill used it — not publicly — in a top-secret telegram to President Truman [May 12, 1945].

Scenes from the Mesozoic

It is possible that our race may be an accident, in a meaningless universe, living its brief life uncared for, on this dark, cooling star: but even so—and all the more—what marvelous creatures we are! What fairy story, what tale from the Arabian Nights of the jinns, is a hundredth part as wonderful as this true fairy story of simians! It is so much more heartening, too, than the tales we invent. A universe capable of giving birth to many such accidents is—blind or not—a good world to live in, a promising universe. . . . We once thought we lived on God's foot-stool; it may be a throne.¹

Father declared he was going to buy a new plot in the cemetery, a plot all for himself. "And I'll buy one on a cor-can get out!"

Mother looked at him, startled but admiring, and whispered to me, "I almost believe he could do it."

Some say the world will end in fire,
Some say in ice.

From what I've tasted of desire

A Mood Apart [1947]

It asks a little of us here.
It asks of us a certain height,

We can only pay our debt to the past by putting the future in debt to our selves.

*Address to the people of Canada,
on the coronation of George VI
[May 12, 1937]*

He [Raymond Asquith] disliked emotion, not because he felt lightly but because he felt deeply. He most sincerely loved his country, but he loved her too much to identify her with the pasteboard goddess of the music halls and the hustings. . . . Austerely self-respecting, he had been used to hide his devotions under a mask of indifference, and would never reveal them except in deeds.

Our roll of honor is long, but it holds no nobler figure. He will stand to those of us who are left as an incarnation of the spirit of the land he loved. . . .
He loved his youth, and his youth has become eternal.

Pilgrim's Way [1940]

Democracy — the essential thing as distinguished from this or that democratic government — was primarily an attitude of mind, a spiritual testament, and not an economic structure or a political machine. The testament involved certain basic beliefs — that the personality was sacrosanct, which was the meaning of liberty; that policy should be settled by free discussion; that normally a minority should be ready to yield to a majority, which in turn should respect a minority's sacred things.

Public life is regarded as the crown of a career, and to young men it is the worthiest ambition. Politics is still the greatest and the most honorable adventure. Ib.

The Last of the Plainsmen, ch. 4

CARL GUSTAV JUNG

1875-1961

The dynamic principle of fantasy is play, which belongs also to the child, and as such it appears to be inconsistent with the principle of serious work. But without this playing with fantasy no creative work has ever yet come to birth. The debt we owe to the play of imagination is incalculable.

Psychological Types [1923],
ch. 1, p. 82

The great problems of life — sexuality, of course, among others — are always related to the primordial images of the collective unconscious. These images are really balancing or compensating factors which correspond with the problems life presents in actuality. This is not to be marveled at, since these images are deposits representing the accumulated experience of thousands of years of struggle for adaptation and existence.

Ib. ch. 5, p. 271

We should not pretend to understand the world only by the intellect; we apprehend it just as much by feeling. Therefore the judgment of the intellect is, at best, only the half of truth, and must, if it be honest, also come to an understanding of its inadequacy.

Ib. conclusion, p. 628

The woman is increasingly aware that love alone can give her her full stature, just as the man begins to discern that spirit alone can endow his life with its highest meaning. Fundamentally, therefore, both seek a psychic relation one to the other, because love needs the spirit, and the spirit love, for their fulfillment.

Contributions to Analytical Psychology [1928], p. 185

Seldom, or perhaps never, does a marriage develop into an individual relationship smoothly and without crises; there is no coming to consciousness without pain.

Contributions to Analytical Psychology, p. 193

In studying the history of the human mind one is impressed again and again by the fact that the growth of the mind is the widening of the range of consciousness, and that each step forward has been a most painful and laborious achievement.

Ib. p. 340

The meeting of two personalities is like the contact of two chemical substances: if there is any reaction, both are transformed.

Modern Man in Search of a Soul
[1933], p. 57

The great decisions of human life have as a rule far more to do with the instincts and other mysterious unconscious factors than with conscious will and well-meaning reasonableness. The shoe that fits one person pinches another; there is no recipe for living that suits all cases. Each of us carries his own life-form — an indeterminate form which cannot be superseded by any other.

Ib. p. 69

Aging people should know that their lives are not mounting and unfolding but that an inexorable inner process forces the contraction of life. For a young person it is almost a sin — and certainly a danger — to be too much occupied with himself; but for the aging person it is a duty and a necessity to give serious attention to himself.

Ib. p. 125

All ages before ours believed in gods in some form or other. Only an unparalleled impoverishment in symbolism could enable us to rediscover the gods as psychic factors, which is to say, as archetypes of the unconscious. No doubt this discovery is hardly credible as yet.

The Integration of the Personality [1939], p. 72

If there is anything that we wish to change in the child, we should first examine it and see whether it is not something that could better be changed in ourselves.

The Integration of the Personality, p. 285

The conscious mind allows itself to be trained like a parrot, but the unconscious does not—which is why St. Augustine thanked God for not making him responsible for his dreams.

Psychology and Alchemy [1953], p. 51

The unconscious is not just evil by nature, it is also the source of the highest good: not only dark but also light, not only bestial, semihuman, and demonic but superhuman, spiritual, and, in the classical sense of the word, "divine."

The Practice of Psychotherapy [1953], p. 364

The little world of childhood with its familiar surroundings is a model of the greater world. The more intensively the family has stamped its character upon the child, the more it will tend to feel and see its earlier miniature world again in the bigger world of adult life. Naturally this is not a conscious, intellectual process.

This whole creation is essentially subjective, and the dream is the theater where the dreamer is at once scene, actor, prompter, stage manager, author, audience, and critic.

Ib. p. 58; vol. 8, General Aspects of Dream Psychology [1928]

The dream is the small hidden door in the deepest and most intimate sanctum of the soul, which opens into that primeval cosmic night that was soul long before there was a conscious ego and will be soul far beyond what a conscious ego could ever reach.

From Psychological Reflections: A Jung Anthology, p. 46; vol. 10, The Meaning of Psychology for Modern Man [1934]

Emotion is the chief source of all becoming-conscious. There can be no transforming of darkness into light and of apathy into movement without emotion.

Ib. p. 32; vol. 9, Psychological Aspects of the Modern Archetype [1938]

No one can flatter himself that he is immune to the spirit of his own epoch, or even that he possesses a full understanding of it. Irrespective of our conscious convictions, each one of us, without exception, being a particle of the general mass, is somewhere attached to, colored by, or even undermined by the spirit which goes through the mass. Freedom stretches only as far as the limits of our consciousness.

Ib. p. 143; vol. 15, Paracelsus the Physician [1942]

Where love rules, there is no will to power; and where power predominates, there love is lacking. The one is the shadow of the other.

Ib. p. 87; vol. 7, The Psychology of the Unconscious [1943]

The erotic instinct is something questionable, and will always be so whatever a future set of laws may have to say on the matter. It belongs, on the one hand, to the original animal nature of man, which will exist as long as man has an animal body. On the other hand, it is connected with the highest forms of the spirit. But it blooms only when spirit and instinct are in true harmony. If one or the other aspect is missing, then an injury occurs, or at least there is a one-sided lack of balance which easily slips into the pathological. Too much of the animal disfigures the civilized human being, too much culture makes a sick animal.

Late on the third day, at the very moment when, at sunset, we were making our way through a herd of hippopotamuses, there flashed upon my mind, unforeseen and unsought, the phrase, "Reverence for Life."¹ . . . Now I had found my way to the idea in which affirmation of the world and ethics are contained side by side; now I knew that the ethical acceptance of the world and of life, together with the ideals of civilization contained in this concept, has a foundation in thought.

[1949]

Affirmation of life is the spiritual act by which man ceases to live unreflectively and begins to devote himself to his life with reverence in order to raise it to its true value. To affirm life is to deepen, to make more inward, and to exalt the will to live.

beauty of it, for the Sea of Galilee has an outlet. It gets to give. It gathers in its riches that it may pour them out the Dead Sea with the same water makes horror. For the Dead Sea has no outlet. It gets to keep.

*Statement of the mass-energy equivalence relationship*¹

The most beautiful thing we can experience is the mysterious. It is the source of all true art and science.

"What I Believe," in Forum
 [October 1930]

It is not enough that you should understand about applied science in order that your work may increase man's blessings. Concern for man himself and his fate must always form the chief interest of all technical endeavors, concern for the great unsolved problems of the organization of labor and the distribution of goods—in order that the creations of our mind shall be a blessing and not a curse to mankind. Never forget this in the midst of your diagrams and equations.

Address, California Institute of Technology [1931]

The whole of science is nothing more than a refinement of everyday thinking.
Physics and Reality [1936]

Physical concepts are free creations of the human mind, and are not, however it may seem, uniquely determined by the external world.

Evolution of Physics [1938]

The original statement is: If a body gives off the energy L in the form of radiation, its mass diminishes by L/c^2 .—Ist die Tragheit eines Körpers von seinem Energiegehalt abhängig? [1905]

Some recent work by E. Fermi and L. Szilard, which has been communicated to me in manuscript, leads me to expect that the element uranium may be turned into a new and important source of energy in the immediate future. Certain aspects of the situation which has arisen seem to call for watchfulness and, if necessary, quick action on the part of the Administration.

Letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt [August 2, 1939] (the letter which resulted in assignment of government funds for development of the atom bomb)

This new phenomena [atomic energy] would also lead to the construction of bombs. . . . A single bomb of this type, carried by boat and exploded in a port, might very well destroy the whole port, together with some of the surrounding territory. However, such bombs might very well prove to be too heavy for transportation by air. Ib.

As long as there are sovereign nations possessing great power, war is inevitable.

Einstein on the Atomic Bomb
[Atlantic Monthly, November 1945]

I do not believe that civilization will be wiped out in a war fought with the atomic bomb. Perhaps two thirds of the people of the earth might be killed, but enough men capable of thinking, and enough books, would be left to start again, and civilization could be restored. Ib.

Since I do not foresee that atomic energy is to be a great boon for a long time, I have to say that for the present it is a menace. Perhaps it is well that it should be. It may intimidate the human race into bringing order into its international affairs, which, without the pressure of fear, it would not do. Ib.

I shall never believe that God plays dice with the world.¹

The Lord God is subtle, but malicious he is not.¹

Inscription in Fine Hall, Princeton University

Every intellectual who is called before one of the committees ought to refuse to testify, i.e., he must be prepared . . . for the sacrifice of his personal welfare in the interest of the cultural welfare of his country. . . . This kind of inquisition violates the spirit of the Constitution.

If enough people are ready to take this grave step they will be successful. If not, then the intellectuals of this country deserve nothing better than the slavery which is intended for them.

Railway termini . . . are our gates to the glorious and the unknown. Through them we pass out into adventure and sunshine, to them, alas! we return. The echo began in some indescribable way to undermine her hold on life. Coming at a moment when she chanced to be fatigued, it had managed to murmur, "Pathos, piety, courage — they exist, but are identical, and so is filth. Everything exists, nothing has value." If one had spoken vileness in that place,

How lonely we shall be!
What shall we do,
You without me,
I without you?

Midnight Lamentation, st. 1

They are better than stars or water,
Better than voices of winds that sing,
Better than any man's fair daughter,
Your green glass beads on a silver ring.
Overheard on a Saltmarsh

A long, dim ecstasy holds her life;
Her world is an infinite shapeless white, Till her tongue has curled the last holy drop,

Then she sinks back into the night.

1879-1939

The sea has always been a seducer, a careless lying fellow, not feminine, as curate cannot explain. — LEONARD MERRICK,

One Man's View [1897]

many writers imagine, but strongly masculine in its allurements. The king of the sea, with his whiskers of weed and his trident and dolphins, truly represents the main and gives it character. The sea, like a great sultan, supports thousands of ships, his lawful wives. These he caresses and chastises as the case may be. This explains the feminine gender of all proper vessels.

1879-1953

Print is the sharpest and the strongest weapon of our party.

Speech [April 19, 1923]

Dizziness from success.

Speech [March 2, 1930]

The most remarkable thing about socialist competition is that it creates a basic change in people's view of labor, since it changes the labor from a shameful and heavy burden into a matter of honor, matter of fame, matter of valor and heroism.

Speech [June 27, 1930]

The Hitlerite blackguards have covered Europe with gallows and concentration camps. . . . They have turned Europe into a prison of nations,¹ and this they call the new order in Europe.

free in whatever form is used. A free form does not assure freedom. As a form, it is just one more form. So that it comes to this, I suppose, that I believe in freedom regardless of form.

A Note on Poetry [1937]

What makes the poet the potent figure that he is, or was, or ought to be, is that he creates the world to which we turn incessantly and without knowing it and that he gives to life the supreme fictions without which we are unable to conceive of it.

The Noble Rider and the Sound of Words [1942]

Each man resembles all other men, each woman resembles all other women, this year resembles last year.
The beginning of time will, no doubt, resemble the end of time. One world is said to resemble another.

Three Academic Pieces [1947]

Poetry is poetry, and one's objective as a poet is to achieve poetry precisely as one's objective in music is to achieve music. There are poets who would regard that as a scandal and who would say that a poem which had no importance except its importance as poetry had no importance at all, and that a poet who had no objective except to achieve poetry was a fribble and something less than a man of reason.

DOUGLAS MacARTHUR

1880-1964

The unfailing formula for production of morale is patriotism, self-respect, discipline, and self-confidence within a military unit, joined with fair treatment and merited appreciation from without. It cannot be produced by pampering or coddling an army, and is not necessarily destroyed by hardship, danger, or even calamity. Though it can survive and develop in adversity that comes as an inescapable incident of service, it will quickly wither and die if soldiers come to believe themselves the victims of indifference or injustice on the part of their government, or of ignorance, personal ambition, or ineptitude on the part of their military leaders.

It is my contention that, if this definition be accepted, there is no country in the world wherein a man constituted as I am—a man of my peculiar weakness, vanities, appetites, and aversions—can be so happy as he can be in the United States. Going further, I lay down the doctrine that it is a

Ain't It Awful, Mabell

[ANGELO GIUSEPPE
RONCALLI]

1881-1963

The social progress, order, security and peace of each country are necessarily connected with the social progress, order, security and peace of all other countries.

At the present day no political community is able to pursue its own interests and develop itself in isolation, because the degree of its prosperity and development is a reflection and a component part of the degree of prosperity and development of all other political communities.

Pacem in Terris
[Encyclical letter,
April 11, 1963]

There exists an intrinsic connection between the common good on the one hand and the structure and function of public authority on the other. The moral order, which needs public authority in order to promote the common good in human society, requires also that the authority be effective in attaining that end. . . .

Today the universal common good poses problems of world-wide dimensions, which cannot be adequately tackled or solved except by the efforts of public authorities endowed with a wideness of power, structure and means of the same proportions: that is, of public authorities which are in a position to operate in an effective manner on a world-wide basis. The moral order itself, therefore, demands that such a form of public authority be established. Ib.

An act of the highest importance performed by the United Nations Organization was the universal Declaration of Human Rights, approved in the General Assembly of December 10, 1948. . . . The document represents an important step on the path towards the juridical-political organization of the world community. For in it, in most solemn form, the dignity of a person is acknowledged to all human beings; and as a consequence there is proclaimed, as a fundamental right, the right of free movement in search for truth and in the attainment of moral good and of justice, and also the right to a dignified life.

Pacem in Terris

The representative of the highest spiritual authority of the earth is glad, indeed boasts, of being the son of a humble but robust and honest laborer.

PABLO PICASSO

1881-

For me, a painting is a dramatic action in the course of which reality finds itself split apart. For me, that dramatic action takes precedence over all other considerations. The pure plastic act is only secondary as far as I'm concerned. What counts is the drama of that plastic act, the moment at which the universe comes out of itself and meets its own destruction.

From FRANÇOISE GILOT AND CARLTON LAKE, Life With Picasso [1964], pt. I

When I was a child, my mother said to me, "If you become a soldier you'll be a general. If you become a monk you'll end up as the Pope." Instead I became a painter and wound up as Picasso. Ib.

Painting isn't an aesthetic operation; it's a form of magic designed as a mediator between this strange hostile world and us, a way of seizing the power by giving form to our terrors as well as our desires. Ib. VI

I am only a public entertainer who has understood his time. Remark

If there were no internal propensity to unite, even at a prodigiously rudimentary level — indeed in the molecule itself — it would be physically impossible for love to appear higher up, with us, in “hominized” form. . . . Driven by the forces of love, the fragments of the world seek each other so that the world may come into being.

The Phenomenon of Man [1955],
bk. IV, ch. 2, sec. 2

Love alone is capable of uniting living beings in such a way as to complete and fulfill them, for it alone takes them and joins them by what is deepest in themselves. . . . Does not love every instant achieve all around us, in the couple or the team, the magic feat . . . of “personalizing” by totalizing? And if that is what it can achieve daily on a small scale, why should it not repeat this one day on world-wide dimensions? Ib.

It is one thing for the human mind to extract from the phenomena of nature the laws which it has itself put into them; it may be a far harder thing to extract laws over which it has no control. It is even possible that laws which have not their origin in the mind may be irrational, and we can never succeed in formulating them.

We have found that where science has progressed the farthest, the mind has but regained from nature that which the mind put into nature.

We have found a strange footprint on the shores of the unknown. We have devised profound theories, one after another, to account for its origin. At last we have succeeded in reconstructing the creature that made the footprint. And lo! it is our own.

Message to Congress [January 6, 1941]

One great difference which has characterized this division [between liberal and conservative parties] has been that the liberal party—no matter what its particular name was at the time—believed in the wisdom and efficacy of the will of the great majority of the people, as distinguished from the judgment of a small minority. . . . The other great difference between the two parties has been this: The liberal party is a party which believes that, as new conditions and problems arise beyond the power of men and women to meet as individuals, it becomes the duty of the Government itself to find new remedies with which to meet them. The liberal party insists that the Government has the definite duty to use all its power and resources to meet new social problems with new social controls—to insure to the average person the right to his own economic and political life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Public Papers and Addresses, 1938 Volume [1941], introduction

We, too, born to freedom, and believing in freedom, are willing to fight to maintain freedom. We, and all others who believe as deeply as we do, would rather die on our feet than live on our knees.²

The phrase was a watchword with the Republican forces in the Spanish Civil War, 1936-1939, and is especially identified with the celebrated woman leader La Pasionara.

When you see a rattlesnake poised to strike, you do not wait until he has struck before you crush him.

Fireside Chat [September 11, 1941]

Yesterday, December 7, 1941—a date which will live in infamy—the United States of America was suddenly and deliberately attacked by naval and air forces of the Empire of Japan.

War Message to Congress [December 8, 1941]

Never before have we had so little time in which to do so much.¹

Fireside Chat [February 23, 1942]

We all know that books burn—yet we have the greater knowledge that books cannot be killed by fire. People die, but books never die. No man and no force can abolish memory. . . . In this war, we know, books are weapons.

Message, American Booksellers Association [April 23, 1942]

It is not a tax bill but a tax relief bill providing relief not for the needy but for the greedy.

Tax bill veto message [February 22, 1944]

These Republican leaders have not been content with attacks on me, or my wife, or on my sons. No, not content with that, they now include my little dog, Fala. Well, of course, I don't resent attacks . . . but Fala does resent them. . . . I think I have a right to resent, to object to libelous statements about my dog.²

Campaign speech, Boston
[November 4, 1944]

The American people are quite competent to judge a political party that works both sides of a street. Ib.

Perfectionism, no less than isolationism or imperialism or power politics, may obstruct the paths to international peace.

State of the Union Message
[January 6, 1945]

We have learned that we cannot live alone, at peace; that our own well-being is dependent on the well-being of other nations, far away. We have learned that we must live as men, and not as ostriches, nor as dogs in the manger. We have learned to be citizens of the world, members of the human community.

Sixth, after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny, they hope to see established a peace which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries, and which will afford assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want.¹

Ib.

Eighth, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armaments continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential.

Ib. II, Years of Trial and Hope, ch. 1

A President either is constantly on top of events or, if he hesitates, events will soon be on top of him. I never felt that I could let up for a single moment. Ib.

No one who has not had the responsibility can really understand what it is like to be President, not even his closest aides or members of his immediate family. There is no end to the chain of responsibility that binds him, and he is never allowed to forget that he is President. Ib.

Once a decision was made, I did not worry about it afterward. Ib.

Most of the problems a President has to face have their roots in the past. Ib.

The Marshall Plan will go down in history as one of America's greatest contributions to the peace of the world. Ib. 8

¹ President Truman has used variations of the aphorism . . . for many years, both orally and in his writings. For instance, in his book Mr. Citizen [1960] in the chapter entitled "Some Thoughts on the Presidency," he states, "Some men can make decisions and some cannot. Some men fret and delay under criticism. I used to have a saying that applies here, and I note that some people have picked it up." — Letter to editor from PHILIP D. LAGERQUIST, Harry S. Truman Library, Independence, Missouri [February 11, 1966]

² See Churchill, p. 920a, and note.

To me, party platforms are contracts with the people.

Memoirs, vol. II, Years of Trial and Hope, ch. 13

Polk was a positive man . . . and settled every issue before his term of office expired. Ib. 14

A man who is influenced by the polls or is afraid to make decisions which may make him unpopular is not a man to represent the welfare of the country. Ib.

A President cannot always be popular. Ib.

Every great President in our history had a policy of his own, which eventually won the people's support. Ib.

Popularity and glamor are only part of the factors involved in winning presidential elections. One of the most important of all is luck. In my own case, luck was always with me, though there was never any intention on my part to make things work my way. If a man starts out to make himself President, he hardly ever arrives. Ib.

A President needs political understanding to run the government, but he may be elected without it. Ib.

The convention system has its faults, of course, but I do not know of a better method for choosing a presidential nominee. Ib.

The Point Four program . . . was created and designed to operate on a continuing basis to point the way to better living for more and more of the world's people — and thus the way to a more lasting peace. Ib. 16

All my life I have fought against prejudice and intolerance. Ib. 19

I have little patience with people who take the Bill of Rights for granted. The Bill of Rights, contained in the first ten amendments to the Constitution, is every American's guarantee of freedom. Ib.

It [General Douglas MacArthur's statement on Korea, March 24, 1951] was in open defiance of my orders as President and as Commander in Chief. This was a challenge to the authority of the President under the Constitution. It also flouted the policy of the United Nations. . . . I was deeply shocked.

Memoirs, vol. II, Years of Trial and Hope, ch. 19

If there is one basic element in our Constitution, it is civilian control of the military. Ib.

There is a right kind and wrong kind of victory, just as there are wars for the right thing and wars that are wrong from every standpoint. . . . The kind of victory MacArthur had in mind — victory by the bombing of Chinese cities, victory by expanding the conflict to all of China — would have been the wrong kind of victory. Ib.

The buck stops here.

The Chinese love jade. That strange lump of stone with its faintly muddy light, like the crystallized air of the centuries, melting dimly, dully back, deeper and deeper — are not we Orientals the only ones who know its charm?
 We cannot say ourselves what it is that we find in this stone. It quite lacks the brightness of a ruby or an emerald or the glitter of a diamond. But this much we can say: when we see that shadowy surface, we think how Chinese it is, we seem to find in cloudiness the accumulated sediment of the long Chinese past, we think how appropriate it is that the Chinese should admire that surface and that shadow.

and color in the dark and loses its beauty in the light of day . . .

Our ancestors cut off the brightness on the land from above and created a world of shadows, and far in the depths of it they placed woman, making her the whitest of beings.

In Praise of Shadows

I would call back at least for literature this world of shadows we are losing. In the mansion called literature I would have the eaves deep and the walls dark, I would push back into the shadows the things that come forward too clearly, I would strip away the useless decoration. I do not ask that this be done everywhere, but perhaps we may be allowed at least one mansion where we can turn off the electric lights and see how it is without them. Ib.

Movement¹ is to substitute a rational life for the irrational.

Speech, Nanchang

The life of our people will be elevated if we live artistically; we will become wealthy if we live productively; and we will be safe if we lead a military way of life. When we do this, we will have a rational life. . . . If we can achieve [a rational life], we will have revolutionized the daily life of our people

America was discovered accidentally by a great seaman who was looking for something else; when discovered it was not wanted; and most of the explora-discovered no part of the New World.

History is like that, very chancy.

potism. The nations that have enjoyed sea power even for a brief period — Athens, Scandinavia, the Netherlands, themselves and have given it to others.

Of the despotism to which unrestrained military power leads we have plenty of examples from Alexander to Mao.

Ib. 3

Make no mistake; the American Revolution was not fought to obtain freedom, but to preserve the liberties that Americans already had as colonials. Independence was no conscious goal, secretly nurtured in cellar or jungle by bearded conspirators, but a reluctant last resort, to preserve "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The Oxford History of the American People, ch. 12

The freedmen were not really free in 1865, nor are most of their descendants really free in 1965. Slavery was but one aspect of a race and color problem that is still far from solution here, or anywhere. In America particularly, the grapes of wrath have not yet yielded all their bitter vintage. Ib. 33

These clipper ships of the early 1850's were built of wood in shipyards from Rockland in Maine to Baltimore. These architects, like poets who transmute nature's message into song, obeyed what wind and wave had taught them, to create the noblest of all sailing vessels, and the most beautiful creations of man in America. With no extraneous ornament except a figurehead, a bit of carving and a few lines of gold leaf, their one purpose of speed over the great ocean routes was achieved by perfect balance of spars and sails to the curving lines of the smooth black hull; and this harmony of mass, form and color was practiced to the music of dancing waves and of brave winds whistling in the rigging. These were our Gothic cathedrals, our Parthenon; but monuments carved from snow. For a few brief years they flashed their splendor around the world, then disappeared with the finality of the wild pigeon.¹

Headpiece filled with straw. Alas!

The Hollow Men [1925], I

Shape without form, shade without color,

Paralyzed force, gesture without mo-

Those who have crossed

With direct eyes, to death's other

Five-Finger Exercises, V

All our knowledge brings us nearer to our ignorance,
All our ignorance brings us nearer to death,
But nearness to death no nearer to God.

more complicated
Of dead and living. Not the intense moment

Isolated, with no before and after,
But a lifetime burning in every moment
And not the lifetime of one man only
But of old stones that cannot be deciphered.

Four Quartets. East Coker, V

Love is most nearly itself
When here and now cease to matter.
Old men ought to be explorers¹
Here and there does not matter
We must be still and still moving Into another intensity
For a further union, a deeper communion

The wave cry, the wind cry, the vast waters

Of the petrel and the porpoise. In my end is my beginning.² Ib.

Ib. The Dry Salvages [1941], I

The sea is the land's edge also, the granite

Into which it reaches, the beaches where it tosses

Its hints of earlier and other creation:
The starfish, the hermit crab, the whale's backbone;

The pools where it offers to our curiosity

The more delicate algae and the sea anemone.

It tosses up our losses, the torn seine,

The Cocktail Party [1950]

It [tradition] cannot be inherited, and if you want it you must obtain it by great labor.

*Tradition and the Individual
Talent [1919]*

The progress of an artist is a continual self-sacrifice, a continual extinction of personality. Ib.

Poetry is not a turning loose of emotion, but an escape from emotion; it is not the expression of personality, but an escape from personality. But, of course, only those who have personality

and note.

and emotions know what it means to want to escape from these things.

Tradition and the Individual Talent

The only way of expressing emotion in the form of art is by finding an "objective correlative"; in other words, a set of objects, a situation, a chain of events which shall be the formula of that particular emotion.

Hamlet and His Problems [1919]

Immature poets imitate; mature poets steal.

Philip Massinger [1920]

Every vital development in language is a development of feeling as well. Ib.

In the seventeenth century a dissociation of sensibility set in, from which we have never recovered; and this dissociation, as is natural, was aggravated by the influence of the two most powerful poets of the century, Milton and Dryden.

The Metaphysical Poets [1921]

Poets in our civilization, as it exists at present, must be difficult. . . . The poet must become more and more comprehensive, more allusive, more indirect, in order to force, to dislocate if necessary, language into its meaning. Ib.

Humility is the most difficult of all virtues to achieve; nothing dies harder than the desire to think well of oneself.

Shakespeare and the Stoicism of Seneca [1927]

The great poet, in writing himself,

mont said much the same thing, in speaking of Flaubert."

If I ask myself . . . why I prefer the poetry of Dante to that of Shakespeare, I should have to say, because it seems to me to illustrate a saner attitude towards the mystery of life.

The Sacred Wood, introduction

The general point of view may be described as classicist in literature, royalist in politics, and Anglo-Catholic in religion.

For Lancelot Andrews [1928],
preface

We fight for lost causes because we know that our defeat and dismay may be the preface to our successors' victory, though that victory itself will be temporary; we fight rather to keep something alive than in the expectation that anything will triumph.

Ib. Francis Herbert Bradley

The great weakness of Pragmatism is that it ends by being of no use to anybody.

Ib.

Genuine poetry can communicate before it is understood.

Dante [1929]

More can be learned about how to write poetry from Dante than from any English poet. . . . The language of each great English poet is his own language; the language of Dante is the perfection of a common language.

Ib.

Shakespeare gives the greatest width of human passion; Dante the greatest altitude and greatest depth.

Ib.

Sometimes, however, to be a "ruined man" is itself a vocation.

The Use of Poetry and the Use of Criticism [1933]. Wordsworth and Coleridge

As things are, and as fundamentally they must always be, poetry is not a career, but a mug's game. No honest poet can ever feel quite sure of the permanent value of what he has written: he may have wasted his time and messed up his life for nothing.

The Use of Poetry and the Use of Criticism. Conclusion

Tradition by itself is not enough; it must be perpetually criticized and brought up to date under the supervision of what I call orthodoxy.

The Long, Long Trail [1913]

WALTER LIPPMANN

1889–

Surely the task of statesmanship is more difficult today than ever before in history. . . . The distance between what we know and what we need to know appears to be greater than ever. . . . Nor can we keep to the problem within our borders. Whether we wish it or not we are involved in the world's problems, and all the winds of heaven blow through our land.

A Preface to Politics [1913],

² Lo, no man taketh his goods with him. — Song of the Harp-Player [c. 2100 B.C.]

The principles of liberalism . . . are older than all existing constitutions and are more deeply rooted than any formulation of them that can be put into words. . . .

The liberal philosophy holds that enduring governments must be accountable to someone beside themselves; that a government responsible only to its own conscience is not for long tolerable. It holds that since any government is liable to fail, there is needed a method of changing the governors without wrecking the state. It holds that unless there is a method, be it through elections or otherwise, by which the governed can make their views effective in some proportion to their weight, the nation is at the mercy of violence in the form of terrorism, assassination, conspiracy, mass compulsion, and civil war.

In Defense of Liberalism [Vanity Fair, November 1934]

The denial that men may be arbitrary in human transactions is the higher law. . . . By this higher law all formal laws and all political behavior are judged in civilized societies. . . . If the sovereign himself may not act willfully, arbitrarily, by personal prerogative, then no one may. His ministers may not. The legislature may not. Majorities may not. Individuals may not. Crowds may not. The national state may not. This law which is the spirit of law is the opposite of an accumulation of old precedents and new fiats. By this higher law, that men must not be arbitrary, the old law is continually tested and the new law reviewed.

The Good Society [1937], ch. 15

In foreign relations, as in all other relations, a policy has been formed only when commitments and power have been brought into balance.

U. S. Foreign Policy [1943]

The final test of a leader is that he leaves behind him in other men the conviction and the will to carry on. . . . The genius of a good leader is to leave behind him a situation which common sense, without the grace of genius, can deal with successfully.

Roosevelt Has Gone
[April 14, 1945]

The world state is inherent in the United Nations as an oak tree is in an acorn. One World or None [1946]

A regime, an established order, is rarely overthrown by a revolutionary movement; usually a regime collapses of its own weakness and corruption and then a revolutionary movement enters among the ruins and takes over the powers that have become vacant.

For Charles de Gaulle [Today and Tomorrow, June 5, 1958]

I don't care about the word isolationism, and I don't care about the word appeasement. I'm interested in the rights and needs and responsibilities of the United States. We are not the policeman of mankind. We are not able to run the world, and we shouldn't pretend that we can. Let us tend to our own business, which is great enough as it is. It's very great. We have neglected our own affairs. Our education is inadequate, our cities are badly built, our social arrangements are unsatisfactory. We can't wait another generation. Unless we can surmount this crisis, and work and get going onto the path of a settlement in Asia, and a settlement in Europe, all of these plans of the Great Society here at home, all the plans for the rebuilding of backward countries in other continents will all be put on the shelf, because war interrupts everything like that.

Conversations with Walter Lippmann [1965]. Lippmann and Eric Sevareid, February 22, 1965

A free press is not a privilege but an organic necessity in a great society. . . . A great society is simply a big and complicated urban society.¹

Responsible journalism is journalism responsible in the last analysis to the editor's own conviction of what, whether interesting or only important, is in the public interest. Ib.

As the free press develops, the paramount point is whether the journalist, like the scientist or scholar, puts truth in the first place or in the second. Ib.

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
1889-1964

The French Revolution of a hundred and fifty years ago gradually ushered in an age of political equality, but the times have changed, and that by itself is not enough today. The boundaries of democracy have to be widened now so as to include economic equality also. This is the great revolution through which we are all passing.

Glimpses of World History [1939]

The basic fact of today is the tremendous pace of change in human life.

Credo [reprinted in the New York Times, September 7, 1958]

Democracy and socialism are means to an end, not the end itself. Ib.

The forces of a capitalist society, if left unchecked, tend to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. Ib.

I want nothing to do with any religion concerned with keeping the masses satisfied to live in hunger, filth, and ignorance. I want nothing to do with any order, religious or otherwise, which does not teach people that they are capable of becoming happier and more civilized, on this earth, capable of becoming true man, master of his fate and captain of his soul.¹

Radio address [July 13, 1940]

Then, at the sight of those bewildered people and of those soldiers in rout . . . I felt myself borne up by a limitless fury. Ah! It's too stupid! The war is beginning as badly as it could. Therefore it must go on. For that, the world is wide. If I live, I will fight, wherever I must, as long as I must, until the enemy is defeated and the national stain washed clean. At present the most unfounded and most harmful distortion is to ridicule Western civilization as materialistic and worship Eastern civilization as spiritual. . . . Modern civilization of the West, built on the foundation of the search for human happiness, not only has definitely increased material enjoyment to no small degree, but can also definitely satisfy the spiritual demands of mankind. Ib.

The most outstanding characteristic of Eastern civilization is to know contentment, whereas that of Western civilization is not to know contentment. Contented Easterners are satisfied with their simple life and therefore do not seek to increase their material enjoyment. . . . They are satisfied with their present lot and environment and therefore do not want to conquer nature but merely be at home with nature and at peace with their lot. Ib.

The civilization under which people are restricted and controlled by a material environment from which they cannot escape, and under which they cannot utilize human thought and intellectual power to change environment and improve conditions, is the civilization of a lazy and nonprogressive people. It is a truly materialistic civilization. Ib.

The world stands out on either side
No wider than the heart is wide;
Above the world is stretched the sky, —
No higher than the soul is high.¹
The heart can push the sea and land
Farther away on either hand;
The soul can split the sky in two,
And let the face of God shine through.
But East and West will pinch the heart
That cannot keep them pushed apart;
And he whose soul is flat — the sky
Will cave in on him by and by.

O God, give us serenity to accept

Prayer [1934]¹

¹ This prayer was composed . . . when Niebuhr preached occasionally in the small church near his summer home in Heath, Massachusetts. After the service, Howard Chandler Robbins, a summer neighbor, asked for a copy. He is reported to have been handed the original, with words to the following effect: "Here, take the prayer. I have no further use for it." Other people, it is clear, have felt differently. Robbins published it as part of a pamphlet the following year. Since then it has been adopted as the motto of Alcoholics Anonymous; the U.S.O. distributed millions of copies to servicemen during World War II; the National Council of Churches has reprinted it; and even today it is used commercially on Christmas cards. — JUNE BINGHAM, Courage to Change: An Introduction to the Life and Thought of Reinhold Niebuhr [1961]

Faith and History [1949]

Nothing worth doing is completed in our lifetime; therefore, we must be saved by hope. Nothing true or beautiful or good makes complete sense in any immediate context of history; therefore, we must be saved by faith. Nothing we do, however virtuous, can be accomplished alone; therefore, we are saved by love. No virtuous act is quite as virtuous from the standpoint of our friend or foe as from our standpoint. Therefore, we must be saved by the final form of love which is forgiveness.

But it [Pearl Harbor], and the subsequent lessons we learned, day by day, until September 1945, should have taught all military men that our military forces are one team — in the game to win regardless of who carries the ball. This is no time for "fancy dancs" who won't hit the line with all they have on every play, unless they can call the signals. Each player on this team — whether he shines in the spotlight of the backfield or eats dirt in the line — must be an All-American.

Nature has . . . some sort of arithmetical-geometrical coordinate system, because nature has all kinds of models. What we experience of nature is in models, and all of nature's models are so beautiful. It struck me that nature's system must be a real beauty, because in chemistry we find that the associations are always in beautiful whole numbers — there are no fractions.

The reason why the hairs stand on end, the eyes water, the throat is constricted, the skin crawls and a shiver runs down the spine when one writes or reads a true poem is that a true poem is necessarily an invocation of the White Goddess, or Muse, the Mother of All Living, the ancient power of fright and lust — the female spider or the queen bee whose embrace is death.¹

As for the aims and ideals of Marxism, there is one feature of them that is now rightly suspect. The taking-over by the state of the means of production and the dictatorship in the interests of the proletariat can by themselves never guarantee the happiness of anybody but the dictators themselves. Marx and Engels, coming out of authoritarian Germany, tended to imagine socialism in authoritarian terms; and Lenin and Trotsky after them, forced as they were to make a beginning among a people who had known nothing but autocracy, also emphasized this side of socialism and founded a dictatorship which perpetuated itself as an autocracy.

The writer's only responsibility is to his art. He will be completely ruthless if he is a good one. He has a dream. It anguishes him so much he must get rid of it. He has no peace until then. Everything goes by the board: honor, pride, decency, security, happiness, all, to get the book written. If a writer has to rob his mother, he will not hesitate; the "Ode on a Grecian Urn" is worth any number of old ladies.

ERNEST HEMINGWAY

1899-1961

You and me, we've made a separate peace.

In Our Time [1924]. A Very Short Story

It makes one feel rather good deciding not to be a bitch. . . . It's sort of what we have instead of God.

The Sun Also Rises [1926], ch. 19

"Oh, Jake," Brett said, "we could have had such a damned good time together." . . .

"Yes," I said. "Isn't it pretty to think so?" Ib. last lines

I was always embarrassed by the words sacred, glorious, and sacrifice and the expression in vain. We had heard them, sometimes standing in the rain almost out of earshot, so that only the shouted words came through . . . now for a long time, and I had seen nothing sacred, and the things that were glorious had no glory and the sacrifices were like the stockyards at Chicago if nothing was done with the meat except to bury it . . . Abstract words such as glory, honor, courage, or hallow were obscene.

A Farewell to Arms [1929], ch. 27

If people bring so much courage to this world the world has to kill them to break them, so of course it kills them. The world breaks everyone and afterward many are strong at the broken places. But those that will not break it kills. It kills the very good and the very gentle and the very brave impartially. If you are none of these you can be sure that it will kill you too but there will be no special hurry.

Ib. 34

That was what you did. You died. You did not know what it was about. You never had time to learn. They threw you in and told you the rules and the first time they caught you off base they killed you.

Ib. 41

It was like saying goodbye to a statue. After a while I went out and left the hospital and walked back to the hotel in the rain.

Definition of "guts" in The New Yorker [November 30, 1929]

I know only that what is moral is what you feel good after and what is immoral is what you feel bad after.

Death in the Afternoon [1932], ch. 1

I was trying to write then and I found the greatest difficulty, aside from knowing truly what you really felt, rather than what you were supposed to feel, and had been taught to feel, was to put down what really happened in action; what the actual things were which produced the emotion that you experienced . . . the real thing, the sequence of motion and fact which made the emotion and which would be as valid in a year or in ten years or, with luck and if you stated it purely enough, always. Ib.

If he wrote it he could get rid of it. He had gotten rid of many things by writing them.

Winner Take Nothing [1933].

Fathers and Sons

All good books are alike in that they are truer than if they had really happened and after you are finished reading one you will feel that all that happened to you and afterwards it all belongs to you: the good and the bad, the ecstasy, the remorse and sorrow, the people and the places and how the weather was. If you can get so that you can give that to people, then you are a writer.

Green Hills of Africa [1935], ch. 1

The rich were dull and they drank too much. . . . He remembered poor Julian¹ and his romantic awe of them and how he had started a story once that began, "The very rich are different from you and me." And how someone² had said to Julian, "Yes, they have more money."

The Snows of Kilimanjaro
[1936]

Kilimanjaro is a snow-covered mountain 19,710 feet high, and is said to be the highest mountain in Africa. Its western summit is called the Masai "Ngàje Ngài," the House of God. Close to the western summit there is the dried and frozen carcass of a leopard. No one has explained what the leopard was seeking at that altitude.

If it is any use to know it, I always try to write on the principle of the iceberg. There is seven-eighths of it under water for every part that shows. Anything you know you can eliminate and it only strengthens your iceberg. It is the part that doesn't show. If a writer omits something because he does not know it then there is a hole in the story.

A Movable Feast [1964], epigraph

ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS

1899—

Democracy . . . is the only form of government that is founded on the dignity of man, not the dignity of some men, of rich men, of educated men or of white men, but of all men. Its sanction is not the sanction of force, but the sanction of human nature. Equality and justice, the two great distinguishing characteristics of democracy, follow inevitably from the conception of men, all men, as rational and spiritual beings.

Democracy and Human Nature

The death of democracy is not likely to be an assassination from ambush. It will be a slow extinction from apathy, indifference, and undernourishment.

The Wild Flag. In The New Yorker [July 3, 1943]

When Mrs. Frederick C. Little's second son was born, everybody noticed that he was not much bigger than a mouse. The truth of the matter was, the baby looked very much like a mouse in every way. He was only two inches high; and he had a mouse's sharp nose, a mouse's tail, a mouse's whiskers, and the pleasant, shy manner of a mouse. Before he was many days old he was not only looking like a mouse but acting like one, too — wearing a gray hat and carrying a small cane.

Something which is vitally important but which, I think, is often lost sight of in the United States . . . is the fact that international life normally has in it strong competitive elements. It did not take the challenge of Communism to produce this situation. Just as there is no uncomplicated personal relationship between individuals, so, I think, there is no international relationship between sovereign states which is without its elements of antagonism, its competitive aspects. Many of the present relationships of international life are only the eroded remnants of ones which, at one time, were relationships of uncompromising hostility. Every government is in some respects a problem for every other government, and it will always be this way so long as the sovereign state, with its supremely self-centered rationale, remains the basis of international life.

Russia and the West under Lenin and Stalin [1961], ch. 25

If we are to regard ourselves as a grown-up nation—and anything else will henceforth be mortally dangerous—then we must, as the Biblical phrase goes, put away childish things; and among these childish things the first to go, in my opinion, should be self-idealization and the search for absolutes in world affairs: for absolute security, absolute amity, absolute harmony.

[March 27, 1964]

We are handicapped by [foreign] policies based on old myths rather than current realities. Ib.

The character of the cold war has been profoundly altered . . . by the implicit repudiation by both sides of a policy of total victory. . . . The effect has been to commit us to a policy that can be accurately, though perhaps not prudently, defined as one of "peaceful coexistence." Ib.

There is much cant in American moralism and not a little inconsistency. Ib.

We are inclined to confuse freedom and democracy, which we regard as moral principles, with the way in which these are practiced in America—with capitalism, federalism and the two-party system, which are not moral principles, but simply the accepted practices of the American people. Ib.

The master myth of the cold war is that the Communist bloc is a monolith, composed of governments which are not really governments at all, but organized conspiracies . . . all equally resolute and implacable in their determination to destroy the free world.

Speech in the Senate

We must dare to think "unthinkable" thoughts. We must learn to explore all the options and possibilities that confront us in a complex and rapidly changing world. We must learn to welcome and not to fear the voices of dissent. We must dare to think about "unthinkable things" because when things become unthinkable, thinking stops and action becomes mindless.

The old lady, quoted by E. M. Forster — "How can I know what I think till I see what I say?" Ib.

Speaking for myself, the questions which interest me most when reading a poem are two. The first is technical: "Here is a verbal contraption. How does it work?" The second is, in the broadest sense, moral: "What kind of a guy inhabits this poem? What is his notion of the good life or the good place? His notion of the Evil One? What does he conceal from the reader? What does he conceal even from himself?"

Ib. II, Making, Knowing and Judging

Whatever its actual content and overt interest, every poem is rooted in imaginative awe. Poetry can do a hundred and one things, delight, sadden, disturb, amuse, instruct — it may express every possible shade of emotion, and describe every conceivable kind of event, but there is only one thing that all poetry must do; it must praise all it can for being and for happening.

The sea lies all around us. The commerce of all lands must cross it. The very winds that move over the lands have been cradled on its broad expanse and seek ever to return to it. The continents themselves dissolve and pass to the sea, in grain after grain of eroded land. . . . In its mysterious past it encompasses all the dim origins of life and receives in the end, after, it may be, many transmutations, the dead husks of that same life. For all at last returns to the sea — the beginning and the end.

Historians and novelists always have known that tragedy wonderfully reveals the nature of man. But, while they have made rich use of war, revolution, and poverty, they have been singularly neg-lectful of financial panics. And one can relish the varied idiocy of human action during a panic to the full, for, while it is a time of great tragedy, nothing is being lost but money.

The stock market is but a mirror which, perhaps as in this instance, somewhat belatedly, provides an image of the underlying or fundamental economic situation. Cause and effect run from the economy to the stock market, never the reverse. In 1929 the economy was headed for trouble. Eventually that trouble was violently reflected in Wall Street. Ib. 6

Men have been swindled by other men on many occasions. The autumn of 1929 was, perhaps, the first occasion when men succeeded on a large scale in swindling themselves. Ib. 7

At any given time there exists an inventory of undiscovered embezzlement in — or more precisely not in — the country's businesses and banks. This inventory — it should perhaps be called the bezzle — amounts at any moment to many millions of dollars. It also varies in size with the business cycle. In good times people are relaxed, trusting, and money is plentiful. But even though money is plentiful, there are always many people who need more. Under these circumstances the rate of embezzlement grows, the rate of discovery falls off, and bezzle increases rapidly. In depression all this is reversed. Money is watched with a narrow, suspicious eye. The man who handles it is assumed to be dishonest until he proves himself otherwise. Audits are penetrating and meticulous. Commercial morality is enormously improved. The bezzle shrinks.

The Great Crash, 1929, ch. 8

Illusion is a comprehensive ill. The rich man who deludes himself into behaving like a mendicant may conserve his fortune although he will not be very happy. The affluent country which conducts its affairs in accordance with rules of another and poorer age also foregoes opportunities. And in misunderstanding itself it will, in any time of difficulty, implacably prescribe for itself the wrong remedies.

The Affluent Society [1958],
ch. 1

... the myth that military power is a function of economic output. If peace and survival are to be achieved, the search must almost certainly go beyond the effort to find a balance in thermonuclear terror.

Ib. 12

The family which takes its mauve and cerise, air-conditioned, power-steered, and power-braked automobile out for a tour passes through cities that are badly paved, made hideous by litter, blighted buildings, billboards, and posts for wires that should long since have been put underground. They pass on into a countryside that has been rendered largely invisible by commercial art. . . . They picnic on exquisitely packaged food from a portable icebox by a polluted stream and go on to spend the night at a park which is a menace to public health and morals. Just before dozing off on an air mattress, beneath a nylon tent, amid the stench of decaying refuse, they may reflect vaguely on the curious unevenness of their blessings. Is this, indeed, the American genius?

The Affluent Society, ch. 18

In a community where public services have failed to keep abreast of private consumption things are very different. Here, in an atmosphere of private opulence and public squalor, the private goods have full sway.

Ib.

Nothing so weakens government as persistent inflation.

Ib.

People are the common denominator of progress. So . . . no improvement is possible with unimproved people, and advance is certain when people are liberated and educated. It would be wrong to dismiss the importance of roads, railroads, power plants, mills, and the other familiar furniture of economic development. . . . But we are coming to realize . . . that there is a certain sterility in economic monuments that stand alone in a sea of illiteracy. Conquest of illiteracy comes first.

1908—

All I have I would have given gladly not to be standing here today.

First address to Congress as President [November 27, 1963]

We have talked long enough in this country about equal rights. We have talked for a hundred years or more. It is time now to write the next chapter — and to write in the books of law.

Ib.

Unfortunately many Americans live on the outskirts of hope — some because of their poverty, some because of their color, and all too many because of both. Our task is to help replace their despair with opportunity.¹

First State of the Union Message
[January 8, 1964]

The challenge of the next half century is whether we have the wisdom to use [our] wealth to enrich and elevate our national life — and to advance the quality of American civilization — for in your time we have the opportunity to move not only toward the rich society and the powerful society but upward to the Great Society.²

Speech, University of Michigan
[May 22, 1964]

This nation, this generation, in this hour has man's first chance to build a Great Society, a place where the meaning of man's life matches the marvels of man's labor.

Address, accepting the Presidential nomination [August 1964]

EDWARD ROSCOE MURROW

1908–1965

I am entirely persuaded that the American public is more reasonable, restrained and mature than most of the broadcast industry's planners believe. Their fear of controversy is not warranted by the evidence.

Speech, Radio and Television News Directors Convention, Chicago [October 15, 1958]

In order to progress, radio need only go backward, to the time when singing commercials were not allowed on news reports, when there was no middle commercial on a news report, when radio was rather proud, alert and fast.

Open House [1941]

The veins within our hands betrayed
our fear.

What we had hoped for had not come to pass. Interlude [1941]

Thought does not crush to stone.
The great sledge drops in vain.
Truth never is undone;
His shafts remain.

The Adamant [1941]

This urge, wrestle, resurrection of dry sticks,

Cut stems struggling to put down feet,
What saint strained so much,

Rose on such lopped limbs to a new life? Cuttings [1948]

I study the lives on a leaf: the little Sleepers, numb nudgers in cold dimensions,

Beetles in caves, newts, stone-deaf fishes,

Lice tethered to long limp subterranean weeds,

Squirmers in bogs,
And bacterial creepers.

The Minimal [1948]

Once upon a tree
I came across a time.

Where Knock Is Open Wide
[1951]

At Woodlawn I heard the dead cry;
I was lulled by the slamming of iron,
A slow drip over stones,
Toads brooding in wells.

All the leaves stuck out their tongues;
I shook the softening chalk of my bones,

Saying,
Snail, snail, glister me forward,
Bird, soft-sigh me home.

Worm, be with me.
This is my hard time.

The Lost Son [1951], 1

I feel the slime of a wet nest.

Beware Mother Mildew.

Nibble again, fish nerves.

The Lost Son, 2

A lively understandable spirit

Once entertained you.

It will come again.

Be still.

Wait.

Ib. 5

And the new plants, still awkward in their soil,

The lovely diminutives.

A Field of Light [1951]

I could watch! I could watch!

I saw the separateness of all things!

Ib.

My meat eats me. Who waits at the gate?

Mother of quartz, your words writhe into my ear.

The Shape of the Fire [1951], 2

To follow the drops sliding from a lifted oar,

Head up, while the rower breathes,

And the small boat drifts quietly

Shoreward;

To know that light falls and fills,

Often without our knowing.

Ib. 5

I remember the neckcurls, limp and damp as tendrils,

And her quick look a sidelong pickerel smile.

The Waking [1953]

I knew a woman, lovely in her bones, When small birds sighed, she would sigh back at them;

Ah, when she moved, she moved more ways than one:

The shapes a bright container can con-

Ib.

Now, in this waning of light,

I rock with the motion of morning;

In the cradle of all that is,

I'm lulled into half-sleep

By the lapping of water,

Cries of the sandpiper.

Water's my will, and my way,

And the spirit runs, intermittently,

In and out of the small waves,

Runs with the intrepid shorebirds —

How graceful the small before danger!

In the first of the moon,

All's a scattering,

A shining.

In a dark time, the eye begins to see.

In a Dark Time [1964], st. 1

A steady storm of correspondences!

A night flowing with birds, a ragged moon,

And in broad day the midnight come again!

Ib. st. 3

Was I too glib about eternal things,

An intimate of air and all its songs?

Pure aimlessness pursued and yet pursued

And all wild longings of the insatiate blood

Brought me down to my knees. O who can be Both moth and flame? The weak moth blundering by.

Whom do we love? I thought I knew the truth;

Of grief I died, but no one knew my death.

The Sequel [1964], I

The soul has many motions, body one.

The Motion [1964], I

Love begets love. This torment is my joy.

Ib. II

Rising or falling's all one discipline!

The line of my horizon's growing thin!

Which is the way? I cry to the dread black,

The shifting shade, the cinders at my back.

Which is the way? I ask, and turn to go,

As a man turns to face on-coming snow.

The Decision [1964], II

What's the worst portion in this mortal life?

A pensive mistress, and a yelping wife.

The Marrow [1964], I

Brooding on God, I may become a man.

Pain wanders through my bones like a lost fire;

What burns me now? Desire, desire, desire.

Ib. II

Lord, hear me out, and hear me out this day:

From me to Thee's a long and terrible way.

The Marrow, III

Yea, I have slain my will, and still I live;

I would be near; I shut my eyes to see;

I bleed my bones, their marrow to bestow

Upon that God who knows what I would know.

Ib. IV

The present falls, the present falls away;

How pure the motion of the rising day, The white sea widening on a farther shore.

The bird, the beating bird, extending wings —

Thus I endure this last pure stretch of joy,

The dire dimension of a final thing.

The Tree, the Bird [1964]

Let others probe the mystery if they can.

Time-harried prisoners of Shall and Will —

The right thing happens to the happy man.

The bird flies out, the bird flies back again;

The hill becomes the valley, and is still; Let others delve that mystery if they can.

The Right Thing [1964], st. 1, 2

Now I adore my life

With the Bird, the abiding Leaf,

With the Fish, the questing Snail,

And the Eye altering all;

And I dance with William Blake

For love, for Love's sake.

Death of a Salesman [1949], act I,

Willy was a salesman. And for a salesman, there is no rock bottom to the life. He don't put a bolt to a nut, he don't tell you the law or give you shine. And when they start not smiling back—that's an earthquake. And then you get yourself a couple of spots on

Remark when asked how he became a hero. Quoted in ARTHUR M. SCHLESINGER, JR., A Thousand Days [1965], ch. 4

For without belittling the courage with which men have died, we should not forget those acts of courage with which men . . . have lived. The courage of life is often a less dramatic spectacle than the courage of a final moment; but it is no less a magnificent mixture of triumph and tragedy. A man does what he must—in spite of personal consequences, in spite of obstacles and dangers and pressures—and that is the basis of all human morality.

Profiles in Courage [1956], ch. 11

state, and local, must be as a city upon a hill,¹ constructed and inhabited by men aware of their grave trust and their great responsibilities.

Speech, Massachusetts State Legislature [January 9, 1961]

For of those to whom much is given, much is required.² And when at some future date the high court of history sits in judgment on each of us, recording whether in our brief span of service we fulfilled our responsibilities to the state, our success or failure, in whatever office we hold, will be measured by the answers to four questions: First, were we truly men of courage . . . Second, were we truly men of judgment . . . Third, were we truly men of integrity . . . Finally, were we truly men of dedication? Ib.

Inaugural address [January 20, 1961]

Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans, born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage, and unwilling to witness or permit the slow undoing of those human rights to which this nation has always been committed, and to which we are committed today at home and around the world.

Inaugural address

All this will not be finished in the first one hundred days. Nor will it be finished in the first one thousand days, nor in the life of this Administration, nor even perhaps in our lifetime on this planet. But let us begin. Ib.

Now the trumpet summons us again — not as a call to bear arms, though arms we need; not as a call to battle, though embattled we are; but a call to bear the burden of a long twilight struggle,¹ year in and year out, “rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation,” a struggle against the common enemies of man: tyranny, poverty, disease and war itself. Ib.

The energy, the faith, the devotion which we bring to this endeavor will light our country and all who serve it, and the glow from that fire can truly light the world. Ib.

And so, my fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country.² Ib.

² For, stripped of the temporary associations which gave rise to it, it is now the moment when by common consent we pause to become conscious of our national life and to rejoice in it, to recall what our country has done for each of us, and to ask ourselves what we can do for our country in return. — OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, JR. Address Before John Sedwick Post No. 4, Grand Army of the Republic [May 30, 1884]

As has often been said, the youth who loves his Alma Mater will always ask, not “What can she do for me?” but “What can I do for her?” — LE BARON RUSSELL BRIGGS, Routine and Ideals [1904]. College Life

In the great fulfillment we must have a citizenship less concerned about what the government can do for it and more anxious about what it can do for the nation. — WARREN GAMALIEL HARDING, Republican National Convention, Chicago [June 7, 1916]

This thought had lain in Kennedy's mind for a long time. As far back as 1945 he had noted down in a looseleaf notebook a quotation from Rousseau: “As soon as any man says of the affairs of the state, What does it matter to

It is our task in our time and in our generation to hand down undiminished to those who come after us, as was handed down to us by those who went before, the natural wealth and beauty which is ours.

Address, dedication ceremonies of the National Wildlife Federation Building [March 3, 1961]

For in the development of this organization [the United Nations] rests the only true alternative to war, and war appeals no longer as a rational alternative. Unconditional war can no longer lead to unconditional victory. It can no longer serve to settle disputes. It can no longer be of concern to great powers alone. For a nuclear disaster, spread by winds and waters and fear, could well engulf the great and the small, the rich and the poor, the committed and the uncommitted alike. Mankind must put an end to war or war will put an end to mankind. So let us resolve that Dag Hammarskjöld did not live, or die, in vain. Let us call a truce to terror.

Address, United Nations
[September 25, 1961]

However close we sometimes seem to that dark and final abyss, let no man of peace and freedom despair. For he does not stand alone. If we all can persevere, if we can in every land and office look beyond our own shores and ambitions, then surely the age will dawn in which the strong are just and the weak secure and the peace preserved. Ib.

Those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable.

Address to Latin American diplomats, the White House
[March 12, 1962]

No one can doubt that the wave of the future is not the conquest of the world by a single dogmatic creed but

me? the state may be given up as lost.” — ARTHUR M. SCHLESINGER, JR. A Thousand Days [1965]. prologue, footnote

the liberation of the diverse energies of free nations and free men.

Address, University of California, Berkeley [March 23, 1962]

I think this is the most extraordinary collection of talent, of human knowledge, that has ever been gathered together at the White House, with the possible exception of when Thomas Jefferson dined alone.

Address, White House dinner and reception honoring Nobel Prize winners [April 1962]

Let us not be blind to our differences — but let us also direct attention to our common interests and the means by which those differences can be resolved. And if we cannot end now our differences, at least we can help make the world safe for diversity.

Address, American University, Washington, D.C. [June 10, 1963]

Every American ought to have the right to be treated as he would wish to be treated, as one would wish his children to be treated. This is not the case.

Television address on civil rights, after the registration of two Negroes at the University of Alabama [June 12, 1963]

We are confronted primarily with a moral issue. It is as old as the Scriptures and is as clear as the American Constitution.

Ib.

No one has been barred on account of his race from fighting or dying for America — there are no “white” or “colored” signs on the foxholes or graveyards of battle.

Message to Congress on proposed civil rights bill [June 19, 1963]

All free men, wherever they may live, are citizens of Berlin. And therefore, as a free man, I take pride in the words “Ich bin ein Berliner.”

Address at City Hall, West Berlin [June 26, 1963]

Yesterday, a shaft of light cut into the darkness. . . . For the first time, an agreement has been reached on bringing the forces of nuclear destruction under international control. . . . It offers to all the world a welcome sign of hope. . . . But the achievement of this goal is not a victory for one side; it is a victory for mankind.

Television address, Washington [July 26, 1963] ¹

When power leads man toward arrogance, poetry reminds him of his limitations. When power narrows the areas of man's concern, poetry reminds him of the richness and diversity of his existence. When power corrupts,² poetry cleanses, for art establishes the basic human truths which must serve as the touchstone of our judgment.

Address, Amherst College [October 26, 1963]

I look forward to a great future for America, a future in which our country will match its military strength with our moral restraint, its wealth with our wisdom, its power with our purpose. I look forward to an America which will not be afraid of grace and beauty, which will protect the beauty of our natural environment . . . an America which will reward achievement in the arts as we reward achievement in business or statecraft. . . . I look forward to an America which commands respect throughout the world not only for its strength but for its civilization as well. And I look forward to a world which will be safe not only for democracy and diversity but also for personal distinction.

Ib.

Washington is a city of southern efficiency and northern charm.

1920-

The most common trait of all primitive peoples is a reverence for the life-giving earth, and the native American shared this elemental ethic: the land was alive to his loving touch, and he, its son, was brother to all creatures. His feelings were made visible in medicine bundles and dance rhythms for rain, and all of his religious rites and land attitudes savored the inseparable world of nature and God, the master of Life.
During the long Indian tenure the land remained undefiled save for scars no deeper than the scratches of cornfield clearings or the farming canals of the Hohokams on the Arizona desert.

A land ethic for tomorrow should be as honest as Thoreau's Walden, and as comprehensive as the sensitive science of ecology. It should stress the oneness of our resources and the live-and-help-live logic of the great chain of life. If,
in our haste to "progress," the economics of ecology are disregarded by citizens and policy makers alike, the result will be an ugly America. Ib. 14

The millions who are poor in the United States tend to become increasingly invisible. . . . It takes an effort of the intellect and will even to see them.

The Other America: Poverty in the United States [1962], ch. 1

The other America, the America of poverty, is hidden today in a way that it never was before. Its millions are socially invisible to the rest of us. . . . The very development of American society is creating a new kind of blindness about poverty. The poor are increasingly slipping out of the very experience and consciousness of the nation. Ib.

That the poor are invisible is one of the most important things about them. They are not simply neglected . . . they are not seen. Ib.

Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.

Letter from the Birmingham jail. In the Atlantic Monthly [August 1963]

Unearned suffering is redemptive. Ib.

Nonviolence is the answer to the crucial political and moral questions of our time; the need for man to overcome oppression and violence without resorting to oppression and violence.

Man must evolve for all human conflict a method which rejects revenge, aggression and retaliation. The foundation of such a method is love.¹

Speech accepting Nobel Peace Prize [December 11, 1964]

The tortuous road which has led from Montgomery to Oslo is a road over which millions of Negroes are traveling to find a new sense of dignity. It will, I am convinced, be widened into a superhighway of justice. Ib.

I accept this award with an abiding faith in America and an audacious faith in the future of mankind. I refuse to accept the idea that the "isness" of man's present nature makes him morally incapable of reaching up for the "oughtness" that forever confronts him. Ib.

I refuse to accept the cynical notion that nation after nation must spiral down a militaristic stairway into the hell of nuclear destruction. I believe that unarmed truth and unconditional love will have the final word in reality. Ib.

Nonviolent action, the Negro saw,
was the way to supplement, not replace,
the process of change. It was the way to divest himself of passivity without arraying himself in vindictive force.

Why We Can't Wait [1964]

The Negro was willing to risk martyrdom in order to move and stir the social conscience of his community and the nation . . . he would force his oppressor to commit his brutality openly, with the rest of the world looking on . . . Nonviolent resistance paralyzed and confused the power structures against which it was directed.

There are some hereditary strokes of character by which a family may be as clearly distinguished as by the blackest features of the human face.

Ib. 12, to the Duke of Grafton [May 30, 1769]

I believe there is yet a spirit of resistance in this country, which will not submit to be oppressed; but I am sure there is a fund of good sense in this country, which cannot be deceived.

Ib. 16, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser (H. S. Woodfall) [July 19, 1769]

We owe it to our ancestors to preserve entire those rights, which they have delivered to our care: we owe it to our posterity, not to suffer their dearest inheritance to be destroyed.

Ib. 20, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [August 8, 1769]

When the constitution is openly invaded, when the first original right of the people, from which all laws derive their authority, is directly attacked, inferior grievances naturally lose their force, and are suffered to pass by without punishment or observation.

The Letters of Junius. 30, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 17, 1769]

There is a moment of difficulty and danger at which flattery and falsehood can no longer deceive, and simplicity itself can no longer be misled.

Ib. 35,¹ to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [December 19, 1769]

They [the Americans] equally detest the pageantry of a king, and the supercilious hypocrisy of a bishop.² Ib.

There is a holy mistaken zeal in politics as well as in religion. By persuading others, we convince ourselves. Ib.

The least considerable man among us has an interest equal to the proudest nobleman, in the laws and constitution of his country, and is equally called upon to make a generous contribution in support of them — whether it be the heart to conceive, the understanding to direct, or the hand to execute.³

Ib. 37, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [March 19, 1770]

We lament the mistakes of a good man, and do not begin to detest him until he affects to renounce his principles.

Ib. 41, to Lord Mansfield [November 14, 1770]

The injustice done to an individual is sometimes of service to the public.

¹ This letter is of great significance in the history of freedom of the press. The publisher was prosecuted for seditious libel, and the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty of printing and publishing only." After a second trial. Woodfall was freed on payment of costs.

Facts are apt to alarm us more than the most dangerous principles.

The Letters of Junius,
41, to Lord Mansfield

An honest man, like the true religion, appeals to the understanding, or modestly confides in the internal evidence of his conscience. The impostor employs force instead of argument, imposes silence where he cannot convince, and propagates his character by the sword.

Ib.

If individuals have no virtues, their vices may be of use to us.

Ib. 59, to the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 5, 1771]

The temple of fame is the shortest passage to riches and preferment.

NURSERY RHYMES¹

A man of words and not of deeds
Is like a garden full of weeds.

A Man of Words and Not of Deeds

It's like a lion at the door;
And when the door begins to crack,
It's like a stick across your back;
And when your back begins to smart,
It's like a penknife in your heart;
And when your heart begins to bleed, You're dead, and dead, and dead, indeed.

¹ The rhymes of Mother Goose originated with Mother Goose Tales as Contes de ma mère l'Oye [1697] by CHARLES PERRAULT [1628-1703]. The Tales were first translated in 1729, the rhymes as Mother Goose's Melody in 1781 by ROBERT SAMBER, and published in London by John Newbery [1713-1767], who originated the publication of children's books. There are many other collections and versions of the rhymes, like Gammer Gurton's Garland [1784], which also included older rhymes of English origin.

Three blind mice, see how they run!
They all ran after the farmer's wife,
She cut off their tails with a carving-knife,

Did you ever see such a sight in your life,

As three blind mice?

Is that Mr. Reilly that owns the hotel?
Well, if that's Mr. Reilly, they speak of so highly,

Upon me soul, Reilly, you're doin' quite well.

Is That Mr. Reilly? ² [1882], chorus

Sow a thought, and you reap an act;

Sow an act, and you reap a habit;

Sow a habit, and you reap a character;

Sow a character, and you reap a destiny.

Quoted by SAMUEL SMILES [1812-1904], Life and Labor [1887]

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party.

[1867-1947] in a speech in the House of Commons*

The codfish lays ten thousand eggs,

The homely hen lays one.

The codfish never cackles

To tell you what she's done.

And so we scorn the codfish,

While the humble hen we prize,

Which only goes to show you

A zealous locksmith died of late,
And did arrive at heaven gate,
He stood without and would not knock,
Because he meant to pick the lock.

Epitaph upon a Puritanical Locksmith; from WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain [1637]

All the brothers were valiant, and all the sisters virtuous.

From the inscription on the tomb of the Duchess of Newcastle in Westminster Abbey [1673]

² The song originated on slave plantations in pre-Civil War days. It became a formal Baptist hymn around 1900, called "I'll Overcome Some Day" by the adapter, C. Albert Tindley. It became a protest theme when used by colored workers in 1946 on picket lines in Charleston, S.C.

A house she hath, 'tis made of such good fashion,
The tenant ne'er shall pay for reparation,
Nor will the landlord ever raise her rent
Or turn her out of doors for nonpayment;
From chimney tax this cell is free,
To such a house who would not tenant be?

INDEX

Entries are arranged alphabetically, with hyphenated words indexed as one word. Spelling is in general in accordance with Webster, with dialect spellings indexed in both dialect and standard forms.

The order for possessives and plurals of identical spelling is: author's, authors, authors'.

For fuller discussion of the index, see the section on the index (pages xvi-xviii) in the Guide to the Use of FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS in the front of the book.
